Inquiry of Long's Rule in Louisiana Planned in House

Hopes to Learn Whether State Government Is Constitutional.

'Don't Care,' Says Senator in N. Y.

Action Pushed Through at Last Minute, Not Noticed in Vote.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

An investigation of Senator Long's Louisiana "dictatorship" last night was reported on Capitol Hill to be a major purpose of an inquiry voted by the Democratic House just before adjournment.

Informed Representatives further said authority for the investigation was granted by House Administration leaders on promptings of members from Louisiana who are opposed to Long and his political control of the State.

New Language Inserted.

The investigating resolution slipped through the House without one word of protest. Members considered it the routine resolution—adopted automatically every two years—setting up a committee of five to investigate and report on 1936 campaign expenditures by candidates for the House.

But new language, reportedly inserted at the urging of anti-Long members, was disclosed yesterday to have extended powers of the investigating committee far beyond customary limits.

Not only was it made certain the committee's authority would embrace the January Louisiana election, but this new sentence appeared in a campaign expenditures resolution for the first time:

"Said committee is hereby authorized to act upon its own initiative and upon such information which in its judgment may be reasonable and reliable."

Byrns to Pick Members.

Some Representatives said privately this sweeping power would authorize the committee to determine whether Louisiana, under Long's political organization, has a "republican form of government as guaranteed by the Constitution."

How far the authority in the resolution will be exercised in investigating Long's political machine was said to depend upon the membership of the committee. Speaker Byrns said yesterday he plans to name the committee today. It will have three Democratic and two Republican members.

Since Representative Granfield (Democrat), Massachusetts, was author of the resolution, it was assumed he would be named chairman.

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Senator Long expressed himself tonight as entirely unconcerned with an investigation of his "dictatorship" in Louisiana.

"I don't care," he replied when informed of the reports current in Washington. "Let 'em investigate. We'll be glad of it."

JOHN A. THAMES.

U. S. Aid Dies In Six-Floor Hotel Plunge

Coroner's Jury in Chicago Says 'Suicide;' Widow Believes He Fell.

John A. Thames, 39, an attorney with the Federal Trade Commission and former secretary to Representative J. Bayard Clark, of North Carolina, plunged six floors to his death from a room in the Commodore Hotel, Chicago, yesterday.

A few hours after Thames' death, a coroner's jury declared it "suicide while despondent," the Associated Press reported. He had gone to Chicago last May on an assignment for the commission and was expected to return to duty in Washington September 1.

No motive was ascribed by the inquest jury. Thames' body struck a cement court six floors below the room and he did not regain consciousness, dying a few minutes later.

Thames, a veteran of the World War and a native of Wilmington, N. C., lived at the Park Lane Apartments here with his wife, Mrs. Grace Thames.

"I'm certain John did not commit suicide," said Mrs. Thames last night. "I learned over the long-distance telephone, in a conversation with a friend of ours, that he lost his balance and fell. We were looking forward to a happy reunion in a few weeks."

Thames came to Washington in 1920 and has been married since 1922. The couple has no children.

Funeral arrangements tentatively were set for tomorrow afternoon, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Austrian Leader Injured in Crash

Minister of Interior Fey Cheats Death in Wreck.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Aug. 27.—Maj. Emil Fey, who has had many narrow escapes since he became politically prominent, escaped death again tonight when his automobile crashed into a tree near Purkersdorf, not far from Vienna.

It was the third automobile accident of recent weeks in which the life of a government leader was imperiled. Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg was injured slightly and his wife killed July 13. A week later, Propaganda Chief Walter Adam was injured in a crash near Baden.

Like Chancellor Schuschnigg's car, the automobile of Fey, minister of interior, struck a tree. Tonight's accident was said to have been caused when a bicycle appeared suddenly from the darkness in front of Fey's automobile.

Fey's injuries were described officially as minor. The bridge of his nose was said to have been broken.

Friends Honor Dawes On His 70th Birthday

Chicago, Aug. 27 (AP).—Gen. Charles G. Dawes was 70 years old today, and although his friends made his birthday anniversary an occasion of importance, the general refused to depart from ordinary business.

The former vice president and American ambassador to England received a number of friends in his City National Bank & Trust Co. office, of which he is chairman. He puffed energetically on one of his famous "underslung" pipes as he said:

"It has always been my custom not to give birthday interviews, and it's certainly too late to change it now."

Samuel Insull, sr., former head of the Midwest Utilities System, was one of those who called on Dawes.

Works Pool May Provide Social Funds

Roosevelt Aids Confer at White House on Emergency Plan.

President, McCarl Work Out Plan to Finance New Bureaus.

By Robert C. Albright.

Funds for a somewhat curtailed social security program and for half-dozen other major activities restricted by failure of the third deficiency bill yesterday were rustled up by congressional leaders in conference with President Roosevelt and Comptroller General J. R. McCarl.

There will have to be some juggling of ledgers, however, and measured inroads on the $4,880,000,000 works relief pool, leaders admitted. McCarl and President Roosevelt are going to "work something out" and make an announcement within a few days, they said.

The bill got jammed in the Huey Long filibuster in Monday night's finale of Congress. Tied up with it was money for launching the Federal-State social aid project, the holding company law, railroad retirement and bus control, the Guffey coal set-up and the new FACA.

Search for Funds.

"It is apparent that the filibuster will work a great hardship, but a study is being made with a view to proceeding wherever it is possible for the administration of the social security act, the railroad retirement act, and other measures which were provided for in the bill," said Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson.

Said Speaker Byrns:

"We are simply exploring the items in the deficiency bill to see what can be done with them and to see to what extent they can be carried out regardless of no appropriations made. Of course no consideration was given to an extra session. I think we will be able to work something out on the social security act."

Earlier yesterday, in an interview, Chairman James P. Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee, estimated $10,250,000,000 of appropriations were authorized during the session just closed. He conceded there was "no chance" of balancing the budget next year, but added he hoped "to make a start" and complete the balance in 1937.

Cotton Discussed.

Buchanan, and House Leader Edward T. Taylor, of Colorado, also attended the White House emergency conference on the third deficiency bill items. Robinson and Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, participated in a second conference with the President on works progress, flood control and the St. Francis basin, located about 75 miles from St. Louis.

Afterward Farm Administrator Chester C. Davis and AAA cotton experts discussed operation of the new cotton loan program, indirectly affected by failure of the third deficiency bill. Following the conference, Davis said funds are available for the program, and projected 10 cent outright loans to cotton farmers, and a 2-cent additional "adjustment," will go forward as scheduled. The AAA is calling on farmers to keep a record of sales for loan plan purposes.

Despite differences among conferees participating in the earlier deficiency bill conference, all were

American, 114, Rallies To Eat Hearty Meal

St. Paul, Nebr., Aug. 27 (AP).—Hospital attendants today predicted the recovery of Solomon Rickner, 114-year-old St. Paul man, after a critical illness from infirmities of age.

Suffering relapses Sunday and yesterday, he was believed near death. Today, attendants marveled to see him rally and eat a hearty breakfast.

Believed by his neighbors to be one of the oldest men in the United States, Rickner has suffered occasional relapses since he received a back injury while chopping wood two years ago.

2 New Deal Fights Reach High Court

Government Files Case for Review of Boston Writ Against AAA.

Power Firm Presents Final Data Against TVA Program.

By the Associated Press.

Actions challenging and defending the constitutionality of two prime New Deal enactments—the TVA and the AAA—yesterday were brought into the new chamber of the Supreme Court.

The high tribunal thus again focused national interest upon the controversy over how far the present Administration can proceed under the Constitution. Questions of high political moment were involved.

The actions yesterday were:

A request by the Justice Department for a review of the Hoosac Mills case, attacking the ruling of the Boston Circuit Court that the collection of AAA processing taxes is unconstitutional;

Completion of a brief by stockholders of the Alabama Power Co., challenging the right of the Tennessee Valley Authority to purchase transmission lines and provide surplus power to municipalities.

The two cases, seen by some as the start of a parade of recent New Deal laws to the Supreme Court, will bring to four the alphabetical issues before the tribunal.

Ginning Tax on Trial.

Already on the docket are a Texas planter's challenge of the validity of the ginning tax imposed by the Bankhead cotton-control act, and another case contesting furnishing of money by the PWA to aid a municipality in setting up an electric plant in competition with a privately owned and operated plant.

The court will reassemble October 7. Justices already have indicated they will expedite oral argument in the New Deal cases and speed their final decisions. Indications appear that decisions in all four cases might be handed down by Christmas.

Current reports that such recently enacted measures as the Guffey coal act and the social security law might be challenged have drawn intimations that, if so, all of the constitutional questions concerned might not be answered before the 1936 presidential election.

But a prompt test of the constitutionality of the new utilities act was projected even though holding company sections of the measure do not become effective until 1938.

Power Lawyers Optimistic.

Utilities lawyers, studying the law for vulnerable spots, asserted they had devised a plan whereby their contention that the law is invalid, in the section ordering abolition of most holding companies,

Work-Or-Jail Threat Fills Jobs in Hurry

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Emergency Relief Bureau announced tonight that it had registered its entire quota of persons for Relief Administrator Hugh S. Johnson's 20,000 WPA jobs.

The quota was filled on the evening of the second day of Johnson's drive to have all the jobs allotted within a week.

Termed by Johnson a "vindication of our belief that people want work," an estimated 10,000 persons shuffled in line from dawn to dusk.

At noon, Johnson said that 5,080 had been assigned to jobs, under the impetus of Mayor LaGuardia's policy of sending to jail on non-support charges all employable men on relief who refused to work.

Break With Soviet Weighed As U. S. Protest Is Rejected

Situation to Be Put Up to Roosevelt Today by State Department.

Definite Move Due; 3 Courses Are Open

America Can Sever Her Relations, Recall Aid, Send New Note.

By Felix Bruner.

Relations between the United States and Soviet Russia were strained almost to the breaking point last night as a result of the Soviet government's flat rejection of the American protest against interference with the internal affairs of this country.

In answer to the charge made by the United States that activities and discussions at the recent meeting of the Third Internationale in Moscow constituted a "flagrant violation" of the Soviet non-interference agreement, the Soviet government disclaimed "obligations of any kind."

Vice Commisar Krestinski, temporarily in charge of foreign affairs, told Ambassador William C. Bullitt at Moscow that "I cannot accept your protest and am obliged to decline it."

Hull Calls Conference.

Following receipt of the text of the note at the State Department late yesterday, Secretary Hull called into conference R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State, and Robert F. Kelley, head of the division of Eastern European affairs, to discuss future action. Hull probably will confer with President Roosevelt today. Meanwhile, the State Department was silent.

In view of the obviously unsatisfactory nature of the reply and of the fact that the United States note, delivered in Moscow Sunday, threatened "most serious consequences" unless the Soviet government promised to prevent further interference, it was expected that some definite action would be taken.

Several courses are open to the United States. Among them are:

1. Complete severance of diplomatic relations.

2. Recall of Ambassador Bullitt, leaving only a charge d'affaires in Moscow.

3. Dispatch of another note to Moscow, making more specific charges of "flagrant violations" of the noninterference pledge which was signed when the Soviet government was recognized in 1933.

Promise Held Broken.

In view of the warning tone of the American note, it was believed most likely that the second course would be pursued. It was pointed out that the United States is definitely on record as warning of "serious consequences" unless interference is stopped. Although the Soviet government disclaimed responsibility for the acts of the Communist convention, the United States holds that its promise not to permit existence within its territories of any organization which has as its aim a change in the political or social order of the United States has been broken.

The State Department, on the other hand, would like, if possible, to avoid a complete break. Such a break would leave the way open for completely unrestrained Communist activities against the United States within the Soviet Union. It would also make difficult business dealings and other relationships of American citizens in Russia.

Because of the tone of the Soviet reply to the American note it is possible that the State Department will take the view that the dispatch of another note would do little good.

Precedents Recalled.

There are a number of precedents for the recall of an ambassador without a complete break in relations. This course was taken by France in 1927 because of alleged Communistic activities in that country. It is believed that should Bullitt be recalled Ambassador Troyanovsky would return to Russia.

In his brief note of reply Krestinski told Bullitt:

"There are contained no facts of any kind in your note of August 25 which could be considered as a

Somali Troops Desert to Fight For Ethiopians

Italy Demands Return of Rifles as Thousands Quit Ranks.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 27.—Reports of the desertion of several thousand Somali troops to the Ethiopian banner reached Addis Ababa today as Emperor Haile Selassie began quietly to pass out reserves of arms to his black warriors.

The reports said the Somali troops had fled to Ethiopia and Italian authorities had demanded return of their rifles.

Some of Haile Selassie's munitions were drawn from secret underground chambers built by Emperor Menelik 2d, uncle of Haile Selassie and victor over the Italians half a century ago.

Arms Kept in Churches.

Other supplies came from ancient monolithic churches in northern Ethiopia, hewn from solid rock. Although religious services are held daily in these quaint churches, priests see no harm in storing ammunition in the cellars because a war against Italy would be regarded by them as a "holy war."

The emperor also ordered emptied other secret ammunition caves in Russia Denies Responsibility For International in Reply

Note Declares Soviets Did Not Violate Pledge of Non-Interference and Complains U. S. Charges Don't Cite Specific Instances.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 27.—Soviet Russia firmly "rejected" today the United States' sharp protest against activities of Communist Internationale.

Moscow denied it had violated a promise not to interfere in the internal affairs of the United States when recognition was extended in 1933.

Standing firm on the argument it had put forth on previous occasions, the Soviet government said it "cannot assume and has never assumed any obligations as regards the Communist Internationale."

The answer to the American protest was contained in a note N. N. Krestinsky, under - commissar for foreign affairs, handed William C. Bullitt, the United States ambassador, early this afternoon. He acted for Maxim Litvinoff, commissar for foreign affairs who is on a vacation in Czechoslovakia.

Claims Charges Not Upheld.

The statement in Bullitt's note charging "flagrant violation" of the Soviet Union's obligations "does not follow from the obligations assumed mutually by both parties," Krestinsky said, "in view of which I cannot accept your protest and am compelled to reject it."

The Embassy cabled the note to Washington and declined comment.

In his protest Sunday Bullitt specifically called attention to paragraph four of Litvinoff's letter to Roosevelt of November 16, 1933, in which he said it would be the fixed policy of the Soviet government not to permit activities in its territory aimed at a change by force in the political or social order of the United States.

Speakers at the recent Comintern (Communist Internationale) Congress here, including several Americans, repeatedly referred to the United States and proposed action

Il Duce Views Italy's Secret War Machines

New Guns and Latest Radio Equipment Are Revealed for First Time.

By the Associated Press.

With the Italian Army, Bolzano, Italy, Aug. 27.—Benito Mussolini said in a speech to a division of his soldiers today, "I wish your arms may always be blessed by victory."

The commander in chief also inspected new and hitherto secret Italian developments in arms, including a powerful machine gun, a mortar revolver and also new developments in wire communication.

Il Duce spoke first to a division of the "Blue" army engaged in gigantic maneuvers in northern Italy against a "Red" army at Pasubio.

"I express to you my lively pleasure over your comportment," he said after the Fascist fighters passed in review. "You carry a glorious name. It is written in indelible characters in the history of our victorious war. Be worthy in every particular when the country calls you to its banners. I wish your arms may always be blessed by victory."

Later he drove to another sector and told soldiers there, "You conducted yourselves admirably, as you should in the Fascist era."

Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel met for the first time during the maneuvers this afternoon.

Nats Lose Two to Browns; Dive Nearer League Cellar

Hadley, Heusiek and Pettit Pounded in Opener for 10–6 Score; Newsom, Wild, Loses, 11–1; Only 2 Games From Bottom.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Louis, Aug. 27.—The tail-spinning Nats plummeted toward eighth place in the American League today when they dropped a double-header to the St. Louis Browns in a pair of slugfests.

Their twin victory, by scores of 10 to 6 and 11 to 1, enabled the Browns to lop two games off Washington's seventh-place margin and reduce the Nats' lead to two games. Another double defeat in the two games scheduled tomorrow would send the Nats into the cellar.

Bucky Harris' regular pitchers were hammered by the revivified Browns in both contests. They pounded Bump Hadley off the mound in the third inning of the opener when they rolled up a 5-3 lead, and continued their assault on Phil Hensiek and Leon Pettit.

Manager Hornsby was forced to use three pitchers to run back the Nats in the opener, Washington outhitting the Browns, 14-13. Dick Coffman failed to last through the second inning, but the rookie Poser and Joe Knott held the Nats in check thereafter.

Buck Newsom was the Browns' victim in the second game. Lacking control, Newsom contributed to his own downfall when he issued 11 passes, most of which figured in the scoring. The left-handed Russ Van Atta proved a puzzle to the Nats.

Washington was off to a two-run lead in the first inning, but before the inning was over, found itself trailing 4-2 as the Browns launched their first assault on Hadley. Coleman, Hemsley and Clift made the productive hits.

Powell's double and Kress' single gave the Nats back a run in the second inning to reduce the Browns' lead to 3-2, but the Browns bounced back with two runs in the fourth, knocking Hadley from the box. Carey's Triple, which Powell misjudged, was the feature blow.

It was against Phil Hensiek in the sixth inning that Big Ed Coleman contributed the crowning blow

Lenin's Body to Last 100 Years, Says Finder of Secret Process

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 27—The body of Nikolai Lenin, preserved by a method Russians have kept secret, may last 100 years, Prof. Boris Ilyich Zbarsky, one of the inventors of the process, said today. Prof. Zbarsky said the method had been successful beyond all early expectations.

The body was turned over to him and the co-inventor, Prof. Vladimir Petrovich Vorobeoff, immediately after the Soviet leader's death in 1924. It was secretly treated and then placed in a red and black marble tomb especially erected in Red Square.

The tomb has been closed most of this summer to be air-conditioned. Prof. Zbarsky said the work probably would be finished September 1 and it would be possible thereafter to keep the tomb open all day instead of one hour as before the air-conditioning. Visitors are permitted to enter the mausoleum at certain hours to view the body, inclosed in a glass case.

Prof. Zbarsky emphatically denied accounts current abroad that the body is "stuffed." He said it was complete except for the heart and brain, which were removed. The brain is preserved at the Moscow Brain Institute.

Zbarsky described the body as still "in perfect condition."

He disclosed work is done periodically on the body to insure against deterioration.

Nazis Behead Young Mother Who Let Her Children Starve

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 27. — Frau Charlotte Jeunemann, young expectant mother, became the fourth woman this year to die on a Nazi chopping block today—because her three children starved to death.

She was led out from a prison cell and beheaded at dawn. A convicted murderer, 23-year-old Willy Gehrke, also was put to death.

The usual Nazi secrecy shrouded both executions. Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, Frau Jeunemann's sole hope after a court appeal had been denied, declined to interfere in her behalf.

A pathetic and sordid story was unraveled during the trial of the bobbed-haired young mother who spent relief money in night life instead of buying food for her children.

"I had no time to give the children food and water," she said. Testimony showed she was enamoured of a musician and spent the money upon him, whisky and cigarettes. Her three little boys wasted away in a dark cellar.

The woman's husband is in an insane asylum. Relief investigations had found two of the children dead in her cold, dark rooms and the third critically ill. He died shortly afterward.

Farm Wife Victim Of Axe Murderer

Husband Finds Body in Blood-Stained Home.

By the Associated Press.

Bridgeton, N. J., Aug. 27.—Mrs. Minnie Horuvitz, about 55, was found slain in the bedroom of her farm home five miles east of Bridgeton today. Coroner Carl Ware said he believed she had been attacked in the kitchen, dragged to the bedroom and hit on the head with an ax.

The body was found by her husband, Frank, after he returned from taking a wagon load of tomatoes to Bridgeton.

He found his wife's broken glasses at the kitchen door. Furniture in the room was broken and a trail of blood led to the bedroom. Coroner Ware said the woman evidently had put up a terrific struggle.

by which the Communists could assume control.

Deliberated Two Days.

The Soviet note was written after two days of deliberations.

The Soviet stand in regard to the Communist Internationale is that it is an international organization having nothing to do with the Soviet government. Paragraph four of Litvinoff's letter was not meant, Soviet sources said, to include the banishment of the internationale from Russian territory.

This was the understanding, Russians said, at the time Litvinoff's letter was delivered.

Verbal protests by the British, Italian and Latvian governments against statements by speakers in the recent seventh congress of the third internationale were "rejected immediately" by the Soviet government, it was revealed.

The three governments made their protests prior to that of the United States.

The British protest was made on August 19 when Lord Chilston, the British amabassador, called on Vice Commissar N. N. Krestinsky.

Britain Protested Speech.

Lord Chilston attacked remarks made by Georgi Dimitroff, Bulgarian Communist leader, who, in a speech before the internationale, accused the British national government of clearing the way for Fascism.

Dimitroff said the Communists favored the return of a labor government in Great Britain with the eventual aim of establishing a Soviet regime there.

The Italian speaker Bastisti told the Internationale that the Communists in Italy were working up opposition to Premier Mussolini's military plans in Africa.

Diplomatic circles were represented as viewing the Soviet rejection as amounting to a declaration that Moscow does not intend to make concessions in spite of any action this stand may invite on the part of the United States.

Initiative for the next move apparently was up to Washington. It was pointed out that Bullitt's statement on Sunday's note, "The United States anticipates serious consequence" if the Soviet government is "unwilling or unable to take appropriate measures to prevent further acts" in disregard of its pledge to the United States, is entirely unanswered in today's note.

Britain 'Discussed' Reds

London, Aug. 27 (AP).—It was officially stated today the British ambassador to Moscow, Lord Chilston, "discussed the matter of Communist activities here during conversations with Russian officials on one or two occasions recently."

The foreign office appeared inclined to minimize the ambassador's action and official quarters did not reveal whether there was a reply to these "discussions" or whether the matter was satisfactorily adjusted.

The ambassador's conversations in Moscow were not termed either protests of representations and further information regarding the details of his action were not divulged.

It was not stated whether the British moves were independent of other nations (the United States, Italy and Latvia), reported in Moscow to have protested.

An Anglo-Russian agreement of 1931 prohibits Communist revolutionary activities here.

Vatican Paper Protests

Vatican City, Aug. 27 (AP). A vigorous defense of the United States' "interference" protest to the Russian Soviet government was published today in the Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper.

Bitterly describing how Russia entered the League of Nations under those parts of the covenant demanding abstention from the internal affairs of other countries, the Osservatore said;

"The Comintern is a species of great Soviet to which come groups from all countries to organize not only communism, but international terrorism."

The paper said the all-Soviet committee fostered by the government had the audacity to discuss ways and means "for organizing Communist revolution in those countries wherein the Soviet government maintains regular diplomatic relations."

The Italian government's spokesman yesterday had expressed indifference, explaining Communism was effectively barred from Italy under the Fascist regime.

Between You and Me

Roosevelt Sets Straight Course; Senate Proud of Forum; Eight on House Honor Roll.

By Raymond Clapper

WHERE does President Roosevelt go from here? The best guess is straight ahead. That he could do anything which would placate the openly warring conservatives, or that he will even try, is extremely doubtful.

So far as can be judged, Mr. Roosevelt cast the die in his famous "horse and buggy" press conference after the Supreme Court's Schechter decision. He pressed relentlessly for drastic utilities regulation and foxed the opposition by slipping through the House at the last moment a death sentence which was modified only to the extent that more merciful lethal gas instead of the ax was to be used. Bungled though it was, his message on wealth-sharing taxes revealed the direction of his appeal for next year. Within a few weeks he goes West—to appear in person and to try to clinch the support of the more progressive and insurgent sections of the country.

Two more straws: First, his insistence to the Young Democrats that economic and social conditions have changed since Adam Smith and that we must adjust "our ideas" (you can make it read "our Constitution" if you like) to the facts of today; second, his request that Congress prepare new NRA legislation for next winter.

Withal, Mr. Roosevelt frequently reiterates he is for individual enterprise and he has just let go with brass knucks at the Communists.

That is to signify among other things that despite what the Republicans say Mr. Roosevelt does not seek to set up a Soviet government here. He does believe that the sphere of government supervision over economic and social affairs should be greater than the old-line Republicans would permit and greater than the Supreme Court, in the NRA decision, would permit. He apparently also believes that the Government can do better some things which his opponents would leave to be done or neglected by private enterprise.

The frontier of Government regulation and control has been advancing, although in an irregular pattern, for years. Contrast the quick action of the Government—under the individualist Republicans—in clamping down control over radio as against the policy after the Civil War toward the railroads. National rail transportation was 30 years old when the Interstate Commerce Commission was created. Mr. Roosevelt is trying to introduce Government control over a number of activities hitherto exempt. There is every indication that this effort will be pressed, the Republicans, conservative Democrats, the Supreme Court, and possibly the Constitution itself to the contrary notwithstanding.

Great is the humiliation of the Senate, collectively and individually, when it must suffer through a performance like Huey Long's closing-night filibuster.

Yet, even in such moments of shame, the Senators take pride in the fact that theirs is the only deliberative body left in the world where men may rise and talk as long as they are physically able. Once in a while the privilege is abused. But the Senate feels that the price of occasional abuse is not too great to pay for this privilege. Regardless of all that is often said in criticism of the Senate it is a great body and the Nation owes to it a monumental debt. It has been the stronghold of real democracy and representative government despite the fact that it goes off the deep end occasionally as it did in trying to jam through the vicious mandatory cotton and wheat loans. Filibusters save the country from unwise and precipitous action more often than they kill off meritorious legislation.

Most of the complaint arises because Senators, being human, like to talk to a gallery. It is the show-off stuff that makes the Senate look cheap. In the old days of the founding fathers, the Senate always met in secret. Only years of agitation forced it to open its doors to the public. From then on the Senate became a cave of the winds, a pain in the neck to every President, a great ventilator for every passing fantasy of political thought, a political variety show offering unending entertainment. Yet in spite of all of this it functions as a steadying force worthy of more respect than it usually receives.

Only eight Representatives out of 435 members answered every rollfil call in the House during the last session. In the 235 days on which Congress met, 204 roll calls were taken, contrasted with only 197 roll calls in both sessions of the previous Congress.

The honor roll for perfect attendance is as follows: Blackney, Republican, Michigan; Church, Republican, Illinois; Golden, Democrat, California; Kloeb, Democrat, Ohio; Lewis, Democrat, Colorado; Michiner, Republican, Michigan; Mitchell, Democrat, Tennessee; Patterson, Democrat, Kansas.

When this Congress was eleted last November, many thought it would be a runaway Congress, that Mr. Roosevelt would have to hold it down. Actually it has been the other way most of the time. Except for Mr. Roosevelt's prodding he would never have obtained the $4,800,000,000 works fund, expanded AAA amendments, additional TVA powers, the utilities death sentence, the Guffey coal act and wealth sharing taxes. Congress trimmed down his proposed banking act, refused to renew NRA along lines he favored. This from a Congress with the largest Administration majority any President ever had since the Civil War Period.

could be taken to the courts almost at once.

The scheme contemplates an application to the Securities Commission for permission to engage in activities which would conflict with the dissolution order two years hence. For instance:

A holding company could seek approval of a bond issue to be backed by unchallengeable assets, such as a first lien on physical property. Such security is recognized by the act itself as valid basis for borrowing money from the public.

However, since the bonds would not mature for some years, and the company would be subject meanwhile to a dissolution order from the commission, the probabilities were said to be that the commission would refuse to approve the issue.

Such refusal could be taken at once to the courts, challenging the constitutionality of all phases of the law directly involved. Moreover, the original application would be phrased and designed so far as possible to bring such a reply from the commission.

Asked their opinion on whether the law could be attacked through such procedure, Administration aids who were prominent in the formulation of the bill expressed belief that it could. They were confident, however, the courts would find the law constitutional.

Procedure Is Outlined.

"As soon as the commission issues an order, based even indirectly upon the act, a company which believes itself aggrieved can take itself to the courts for a test of constitutionality," one of them said.

Eventually, the act is expected to be attacked from three quarters in the power industry.

Associated Gas & Electric, which spent nearly $1,000,000 opposing enactment, was ready to go ahead almost at once. Cities Service also was looked to for prompt action.

Ultimately, the Edison Electric Institute was expected by utility men to form a pool of its member holding company systems for a concerted assault upon the act, retaining renowned constitutional lawyers.

However, it was indicated the institute, which was represented in the pre-enactment battle by the committee of public utility executives headed by Philip Gadsden, might hold back for a time, pending some understanding on administration of the act similar to that through which the New York Stock Exchange has worked in co-operation with the commission.

Collection of Antiques Assembled by Dentist

Humboldt, Iowa (U.P.).—A unique collection of antiques has been assembled here by Dr. T. E. Devereaux, 77-year-old dentist. Among the ancient works are walnut decorations, chairs, tables and a bed dating back more than 300 years.

In his art collection is a painting from the brush of Wilbur A. Reaser, New York artist formerly of Iowa. The aged dentist has refused a price of $1,500 for the canvas.

Dr. Devereaux, a former Davenport resident, gained considerable renown as a painter. His portraits of Abraham Lincoln, the late P. M. Cassidy and Simon Cassidy hang in Des Moines school buildings and banks.

the interior, dating from the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.

The Gallas, who are considered the fiercest tribe in Ethiopia, were supplied with modern riffes. The warriors are proud of the shining firearms. Their previous rifles were rusty and antiquated.

The Gallas live on raw meat and never use camp fires. Their only shelter is a heavy sheepskin cape, which serves as a tent, bed and raincoat. They are born cavalrymen and hunt the largest wild beasts with nothing more than daggers.

There was a rush on the National Bank as foreigners and natives alike hastened to convert their paper thalers into silver money. More than 100 Greeks, Italians and Armenians left the country.

Americans began laying in emergency foodstuffs, fearing the railroad line to French Somaliland would be cut off if war begins. Ethiopians continued to evacuate the capital, returning to villages.

A picturesque feature of today's preparations was the sending to the southern frontier of 300 camels, laden with munitions.

Text of the Soviet Note

Following is the text of the Soviet note, addressed to Ambassador Bullitt, rejecting the United States' protest against interference in the internal affairs of this country:

Mr. Ambassador:

By note of August 25 of this year you invited my attention to the activity of the Congress of the Communist International which took place at Moscow and referring to the note of the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs Litvinov to the President of the United States of America Mr. Roosevelt under date of November 16, 1933, protested against this activity considered by your Government as a violation of the obligations of the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics concerning non-interference in the internal affairs of the United States provided for in the note of November 16, 1933.

In connection therewith I consider it necessary to emphasize with all firmness that the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has always regarded and still regards with the greatest respect all obligations which it has taken upon itself including naturally the mutual obligation concerning non-interference in internal affairs provided for in the exchange of notes of November 16, 1933, and discussed in detail in the conversations between the President of the United States of America, Mr. Roosevelt, and the People's Commissar Litvinov. There are contained no facts of any kind in your note of August 25 which could be considered as a violation on the part of the Soviet Government of its obligations.

On the other hand it is certainly not unknown to the Government of the United States that the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics can not take upon itself, and has not taken upon itself, obligations of any kind with regard to the Communist International.

Hence the assertion concerning the violation by the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics of the obligations contained in the note of November 16, 1933, does not emanate from obligations accepted by both sides, in consequence of which I can not accept your protest and am obliged to decline it.

The Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, sincerely sharing the opinion of the Government of the United States of America that strict mutual non-interference in internal affairs is an essential prerequisite for the maintenance of friendly relations between our countries, and steadfastly carrying out this policy in practice, declares that it has as its aim the further development of friendly collaboration between the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and the United States of America responding to the interests of the people of the Soviet Union and the United States of America and possessing such great importance for the cause of universal peace.

Taking advantage of the occasion, I invite you to accept the assurances of my high esteem.

violation on the part of the Soviet government of its obligations."

The United States, in its note, took the attitude that the aims and purposes of the Third Internationale were well-known to the Soviet government and that a recital of details was unnecessary. Reports from Moscow indicated that Josef Stalin was present at the meeting of the organization.

Obligation Denied.

"'On the other hand,' re reply continued, "it is certainly not unknown to the Government of the United States that the government of the Soviet Socialist Republics can not take upon itself obligations of any kind with regard to the Communist International."

Contrary to this statement, it has been understood here that the principal purpose of exacting a pledge of noninterference from the Soviet government was to guard against the activities of the Third International.

Ambassador Troyanovsky, in his statement preceding the issuance of the Soviet reply, said that activities of the Third International in Miscow were "insignificant" compared with anti-Soviet activities in this country. The Unted States has made a reciprocal non-interference pledge to the Soviet Union, but it binds itself to act only within the provisions of the Constitution and laws of this country. This reference was to the constitutional guarantees of free speech and freedom of the press.

in general agreement that a solution will be found.

House Leader Taylor was the most optimistic.

"I think everything can be taken care of," he said.

Representative Buchanan expressed doubt about social security drafts from the work relief fund, where no new employment is involved, and outright grants to the State for public health aid. Another one of the conferees, however, who declined to be quoted, said allotments similar to those now made for relief can be made on the same basis to States qualifying under old-age pension stands set up in the social security bill. There was still some question about allocations to the District for aid of Washington's indigent aged and needy blind.

Il Duce Views Italy's Secret War Machines

Il Duce and the King, an old soldier, discussed the program at some length, standing apart from a small semicircle of generals.

Congratulations were given by the dictator to military experts after he inspected the latest developments in arms.

He saw a new fiat machine gun with a reported greater power of fire and with new, easy changing parts. He saw a mortar revolver capable of threwing several scores of heavy bombs a minute. He was particularly struck by the development of telephone and radio communication.

Il Duce pent some time visiting the portable telephone exchange, which is drawn from place to place by a tractor. The exchange, an Italian invention, is used for the first time in these maneuvers.

Tank-Radios Used.

Radio sets installed in tanks, permitting new radio and telephone communication, were demonstrated for the premier. He was particularly interested in the fact the Italian cavalry now carries wireless equipment.

Another instrument exhibited to Mussolini is a radio instrument which makes possible communications through a light beam when wire communications are interrupted.

The maneuvers will be completed tomorrow in time to permit Il Duce to preside at an extraordinary sabinet session, the first to be held outside of Rome in 13 years. Thursday will be a day of preparation for Friday's big review, when the infantry will advance under actual artillery fire. Mussolini is scheduled to speak to the soldiers Saturday.

On the eve of the important extraordinary cabinet meeting, rumors were rife in government and semi-official circles tonight that history-making decisions would be reached.

May Dispatch Fleet.

These sources said, for instance, that as a countergesture to England's sending of her Mediterranean fleet to Suez Canal waters, Mussolini would order the main Italian fleet to the same waters.

Thus, both fleets would be lined up, within touch of each other and with their eyes fixed on that channel which is vital to Italian interests in east Africa.

Another report was that the Red Sea fleet, which Mussolini created and heads, would be augmented to patrol the other side of the Suez Canal.

A possible gesture toward England and France was seen when Mussolini took British and French military missions and newspapermen of those countries on a visit to maneuvers. They were his guests at luncheon. Il Duce was particularly cordial but made no speech

In the afternoon he permitted correspondents of other nations to accompany him, but he continued to direct all his remarks to British and French officers and newsmen.

500 Kinds of Wood Are Used in Table

Burlington, Iowa, Aug. 13 (U.P.).—An elaborate wooden table, started in 1905, and completed only a short time ago, has been displayed here. It was done by Walter Bied, a woodworker. It contains 2,071,842 pieces of wood, representing 30 years of work and planning. There are more than 500 different varieties of wood in the table, including some pieces from historical bits of furniture handed down from colonial days.

About five pounds of glue were used to piece the wood together, Bied said. At first glance the table appears to be a haphazard jumble. A close examination, however, shows that designs such as smiling dragons, jewel and flower designs and scenic backgrounds have been inlaid.

Steubenville, Ohio (U.P.).—Eldridge Thompson, 18, of Gladow, Va., doesn't like soap and water. He appeared at the transient bureau and asked for a meal. He was told he would be fed, if he would wash. The youth walked to the street and threw a stone through a plate-glass window in the bureau.

Convicts Study Hinduism.

Lewisburg, Pa. (U.P.).—Northeastern Federal Penitentiary's 1,250 convicts read on an average of 300 books a day, according to W. J. Lahodney, the prison education supervisor. Among the subjects studied are Hindu philosophy, business law, English and vocational training.

Early Monster Found.

Fort Peck, Mont. (U.P.).—Fossilized remains of another prehistoric reptile have been found in the sands of Big Dry Creek, 25 miles south of here. The reptile, a three-horned monster identified as a Triceratops, was said to have lived some 50,000,000 years ago.

Wicomico Revises Projects Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., Aug. 27.—Following the announcement yesterday of the changes in WPA and PWA policies in Maryland, this county began a revision of its entire projects program today. Twenty-one WPA projects had been filed with the State administrator and several forwarded to Washington for final approval. The county's PWA program also was before Administrator Harold L. Ickes for final sanction.

Under the revised policy this country's allotment cannot exceed $400,000, of which $225,000 may be utilized as a PWA grant and the remainder for WPA projects.

For construction of four school buildings and extension of the court house, including a new jail, the county had filed a $841,750 program, with a request that $375,787 be made an outright grant and the county would finance the remainder.

The 21 WPA projects filed called for an expenditure of $324,000 of which a share would be financed by the county or other local political sub-division.

Accident Report Moves Boone, Iowa, to Action

Boone, Iowa (U.P.).—Boone has come to feel that it is unsafe to walk out of the house any longer, or drive a car.

A report on auto accidents between April 1 and July 1 reveals 118. This figure is not far behind the total of 358 auto crashes during 1934.

Mayor J. E. Erwin, who has started a campaign against careless motoring, believes a majority of accidents are caused by faulty brakes, lights and steering apparatus. And while he did not mention cranial "vacuums," he intimated that many persons driving recklessly lack the mental equipment to handle a car properly.

Judge to Select Best of 8 Boys To Be a Cadet

Finalists in Post's Essay Contest Appear Today for Interviews.

Eight Washington boys, finalists in The Washington Post-Staunton Military Academy scholarship competition, waited in tense anxiety and hope today as five judges, re-examining their submitted essays and personally questioning them, prepared to select from their number one boy who will be given two years at the famous Virginia military school with all expenses paid. The judges' decision, to be made this afternoon, will be announced in The Washington Post on Sunday.

The eight boys are Richard Ross Rebert, Masonic and Eastern Star Home; Carl L. Riemer, 2920 Porter street; James J. Murname, 3918 Morrison street northwest; Sherman R. Greene, 1437 Rhode Island avenue northwest; John Blish, 1650 Harvard street northwest; Forbes Barry, 4203 New Hampshire avenue; Lloyd H. Lipkey, 628 G street southwest, and Joseph Anthony Purks, 601 Somerset place northwest.

The judges' committee is impartial and capable. Its chairman, who will conduct the interviews, is Joseph Malloy, commander of the District Department of the American Legion, which co-operated with The Post in conducting the scholarship contest. Commander Malloy is assisted by William Dow Boutwell, editor, office of education, Department of the Interior; Miss Eunice Dessez, chairman of the War Orphans' Committee of the District Department of the Legion; John Clarke, editorial writer for The Post, and J. Bernard Wyckoff, chairman of the Metropolitan unit of the 1935 Community Chest. Each has long been interested in youth education.

tSaunton offers unusual opportunities for any youth to obtain scholastic distinction ,to receive vocational guidance which will aid him in choosing a career, or to form contacts which will help him later in business and social life ,and the judges' committee, in making its decision, will seek to select the boy whose record and future potentialities make him most deserving.

The second prize, a week's stay at Camp Calvert, on the shore of Lake Breton, in St. Marys County, Md. Because of an unavoidable delay in making the final decision, the 1935 camp season will be closed before the second prize winner can take advantage of it. However, Brother Rogatus, C. F. X., camp director, has generously offered the winning boy a week at the 1936 camp.

Examination will begin at 2 p. m. today in the executive offices of The Post.

Four Men Seized In Theft of Cars

One Was on Parole From Maryland Prison.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Aug. 27.—Authorities believe they have solved the systery of several automobile thefts recently with the arrest of four men, one of whom was a parole from the Maryland State Penitentiary.

In the posession of Andrew Bevans, one of the four, a false automobile license plate was found and authoritise learned he had been employed in the license plate making factory at the penitentiary before he was paroled three months ago.

Bevans and John Rantz, of Pocomoke, were arrested last week in Chattanooga, Tenn., in an automobile stolen from Alymer Tilghman and were brought here Sunday.

Officers were informed they obtained the car from Irvin Townsend and Alfred Henderson, who were arrested yesterday and, according to Sheriff Charles H. Truitt, admitted stealing the Tilghman machine . They were held on a grand larceny change. Bevans and Rantz were turned over to Worcester County authorities, who said Bevans would be returned to the penitentiary.

Pennsylvania Will Advertise State's Beauty

Commission of 6 Members to Supervise Publicity Campaign.

By the United Press.

Harrisburg, Pa. — Pennsylvania's scenic beauty is to be sold to "consumers" throughout the United States.

For that purpose the Legislature approved an appropriation of $20,000 and Gov. Earle affixed his signature.

A six-member commission, composed of Secretary of Forests and Waters Thomas Buchanan; the chairman of the Pennsylvania historical commission, and four gubernatorial appointees will supervise the work.

It will start in the fall and, through the medium of pamphlets, advertisements, maps and speakers, the wealth of historical and scenic beauty in Pennsylvania will be publicized.

The highway department has stolen the march on the commission created by the 1935 Legislature. During the last six months that department has released to newspapers a series of articles in which many points of interest throughout the State have been discussed.

Highway Department Active.

However, this move on the part of the highway department has not spread the facts of Pennsylvania's beauty to other States. These stories have been used locally for the benefit of home folks wanting a place to visit on week-ends and vacation tours.

The new commission expects to spread its sales campaign to many other States in an effort to bring outsiders into Pennsylvania.

Warren Van Dyke, secretary of highways, in discussing his department's activities said:

"For years I have followed with interest the efforts of other States to attract tourists within their borders. Pennsylvania has been remiss in this respect and we have hidden our light under a bushel.

"In the highway department we are attempting to change all that. We have embarked upon a State-wide publicity campaign which is directed at our people in a campaign to stimulate interest in Pennsylvania as an ideal spot in which to spend a vacation or make an automobile tour.

State Pride Is Invoked.

"This is an important enterprise. Not only from a commercial standpoint but from the standpoint of State pride, we should all make every effort to get our friends and relatives in other States to include Pennsylvania in their travel plans."

Pointing to the historical sites, the scenic beauties, the sportsmen's paradises and other points of general interest within the Commonwealth, Secretary Buchanan said:

"A vacation spent in Pennsylvania State forests, where areas for recreation have been highly developed during the last few years, affords a period of relaxation and contentment that anyone needs these days.

"It will acquaint the vacationist with the unparalleled beauties that are Pennsylvania's, and will disclose the great natural resources of the State in which we live."

He urged all vacationists to take advantage of the camping facilities available at the many State forests parks and public camping grounds throughout the State.

MAKING permanent a unit that has been operating on a tentative basis since last January, five officials of the Capital Stock Tax Division, Internal Revenue, were officially sworn in yesterday at noon.

Those inducted into office were C. W. Stewart, head, Capital Stock Tax Division; C. C. Gray, chief, Ruling Section; George L. Brannan, chief, Audit Section; Edmund A. Flagg, chief, Administrative Section, and John Hartmann, chief, Affiliated Subsection.

These officials will have charge of the division which handles the tax on the capital stock of corporations.

Desks of the officers were decorated with flowers by employes of the division.

Bowling League.

Competition is still keen as 10 mixed doubles teams go into the back stretch of the Internal Revenue Summer Bowling League. Miss Anne Pepas, stenographer, Internal Revenue, and G. M. Van Hoesen, Estate Tax Division, the present leaders of the league, are making a strong bid for top honors.

The leaders have an average of .688 per cent to date and have only three more contests to play before the season closes on September 11. On the final night the teams of the league will compete in a sweepstake contest, when prizes will be awarded the winners.

A remarkable feature of this summer's play has been the keen interest the teams have displayed. Not a team has dropped from the league since play was begun early this summer, according to E. H. Holkamp (F), chief, Communication Section, Internal Revenue, who is official scorer for the league.

Prizes have been awarded the winning team in the weekly contests.

Honored for original contributions to research in engineering, C. A. Hogentogler, sr. (P), highway engineer, and E. A. Willis (P), assistant highway engineer, have been awarded the Charles B. Dudley medal of the American Society for Testing Materials.

Employes Buy Lots.

Interest in the Agriculture Community Planning Committee's home ownership project for Government employes is mounting daily, according to George Day, BAE, member of the committee, who reports that 22 lots have been sold to employes.

In addition to plans for four types of homes, which already have been prepared, sketches of a series of bungalows will be ready for display within a few days, Day said.

Participation in the home building program is not limited to Agriculture workers but is open to employes of the other departments. Members of the committee will be in room No. 2005 every afternoon this week, after working hours, to explain the plan to prospective co-operators.

Rough sledding for the Sirovich bill in the House Civil Service Committee has caused the original measure to be broken up into four parts. Tentative plans indicate that the main provisions of the original bill will be contained in four separate bills covering the extension of the civil service, liberalization of retirement laws, new classification proposals and creating a civil service board of appeals.

Boat Ride Today.

A boat ride on the Potomac, beginning at 5:30 p. m. today, and dinner at Marshall Hall have been planned for employes of the Purchasing Office, Interior. High lights of the entertainment program will be music and speeches at the dinner. Walter B. Fry is chief of the Purchasing Office and Amos Hawk is chairman of the program committee.

Branch No. 2, N. F. F. E., Agriculture, will discuss "How Can the Branch Work More Effectively to Make the Department a Better Place in Which to Work?" at a meeting Wednesday at 8 p. m. Additional business of the meeting to be held at 710 Fourteenth street northwest is to appoint a committee to revise the constitution of the group.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor, today only, between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F) Loew's Fox stage, Maj. Edward Bowes' Amateur Show in person; screen, "Woman Wanted" with Maureen O'Sullivan, Joel McCrea and Lewis Stone); or (P) Loew's Palace (second week of Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery in "China Seas"); or (C) Loew's Columbia (James Dunn and Arline Judge in "Welcome Home").

A new type of anemometer, especially designed for measuring slow air movements such as are present in refrigerator cars, has been developed by the bureaus of Agricultural Engineering and Plant Industry, Agriculture. Operation of the instrument depends on the cooling of a heated wire when exposed to air currents.

The biennial convention of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks will open at Atlanta, Ga., next Monday.

Responding to requests from the American Federation of Government Employes, many members of the Senate have indicated they are strongly sympathetic with the leave bill legislation and are eager to have it adopted, according to a report from the employe-group's headquarters.

Among the Senators who are said to have expressed their sympathy for the measure are Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Senator Joseph Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Senator Morris Sheppard, of Texas, and Senator Rush D. Holt, of West Virginia.

Acknowledgements, most of them indicating a favorable attitude toward the bills, were received from many other members, it was reported by A. F. G. E.

Miss Mirrian Stackhouse (C), Transient Bureau, Public Welfare, has returned from a visit to Scottsville, Va.

H. L. McLeod, Division of Printing, Treasury, is spending his vacation in the West.

Charlie Chaplin Mourns Passing of Mack Swain, Pioneer in Keystone Comedies

Old-Time Film ComedianDead On West Coast

Cagney and O'Brien Back at Met Tomorrow; Beauty Quest.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

Mack Swain is dead.

The 300-pound comedian whose name means nothing to today's children but just let them ask their parents, the laughable pioneer of Keystone Komedies who could take a custard pie in the face and give one, too, has gone to join Mabel Normand and Marie Dressler, two of his old-time screen companions, in a truly shadow world.

An Associated Press dispatch from Hollywood yesterday told of his passing and how Charles Chaplin paused in his studio activities to mourn "Mr. Ambrose."

"He was the most amiable and friendly of characters," said Chaplin, "and I feel real pain at his passing."

A hemorrhage, suffered in Tacoma, Wash., was the old trouper's final curtain. Old? He was but 59, though the time when he rollicked across film screens seems so far distant that one may be excused for thinking Mack Swain should have been a man of more years than 59.

He died at a time which might have been the eve of a comeback, for it is more than just talk that there will be a revival of Mack Sennett comedies in which sticky pies, brickbats (of cork), Keystone Kops and dimpled heroines were combined to form an effective, however insane, band of entertainment.

As "Mr. Ambrose" to Chester Conklin's "Mr. Walrus," Swain kept his admirers in stitches 18, 19, 20 years ago. In his day there were no big-salaried "stars." More than once he threw Mabel Normand, Wallace Beery, Ford Sterling and Hank Mann into a lake. Not infrequently they returned the compliment.

Was Veteran of Stage.

He was the late Marie Dressler's father in "Tillie's Punctured Romance," one of the most famous comedies ever produced in the movie colony. His last appearance with Charles Chaplin was in "The Gold Rush." Of the feature-length pictures in which the 6-foot-2-inch Mack Swain had a part, the most notable were, besides "The Gold Rush," "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," "Cohens and Kellys," "Marianne," and "Cohens and Kellys in Atlantic City."

The son of Ingaborg Jensen Swain and Robert H. Swain, the hefty comedian was born in Salt Lake City on February 16, 1876. He had 22 years' stage training in vaudeville, minstrel, comedy-drama and musical comedy before entering pictures.

Those who ever saw Mack Swain, particularly those who remember him from Keystone days, won't forget that low comedy face very soon. We don't believe he would have wanted a finer memorial.

Reopening of Belasco.

According to reports going around town, the interior of the old Belasco Theater will be scarcely recognizable when "The Loves of a Dictator" reopens the veteran amusement shop next Saturday morning. No first-hand information yet, but this department hopes to give the place, which has been resounding with the whackety-whack of carpenters' hammers for weeks, a careful once over tomorrow on the occasion of a critics' screening of the new British film.

Described as "a historical romance of iron hands and human hearts," the co-starring vehicle of Clive Brook and Madeleine Carroll is laid in seventeenth century Denmark. Its first showing will be at 11:30 a. m. Saturday.

The refurbished Belasco will return to the same continuous-performance policy it followed last season as a movie theater specializing in the foreign-made product.

Three days in advance of its F street debut, "Anna Karenina" will be unreeled at the Fox exchange at 1 p. m. today. Don't be surprised, therefore, if tomorrow's column has a word or two about the Garbo voice, Fredric March's frown, Freddie Bartholomew's enunciation, May Robson's bite, Reginald Denny's grin, or Basil Rathbone's leer.

"Smart Girl" having been something of a Metropolitan boxoffice disappointment, she will bow out at the close of tonight's performance, to be succeeded on the morrow by James Cagney and Pat O'Brien in a return engagement of "The Irish in Us." Featured in the Warner Brothers comedy, which had a successful stay at the Earle a few weeks ago, are Frank McHugh, the fireman; Mary Gordon, the Irish mother; Olivia de Havilland, the police chief's daughter, and Allen Jenkins, pugilist de luxe. The main attraction will be supplemented by a Popeye cartoon and 15-minutes worth of newsreel.

Here it is Tuesday, with the "Miss Washington" beauty contest scheduled to open at Chevy Chase Lake tonight and Nelson B. Bell, one of the judges as well as regular conductor of this department, still sick in bed. (Aside to the boss: If we're supposed to stooge for Nelson on beauty contests, too, can it be done without the wife finding out?)

Too bad, Mr. Bell, too bad, indeed. Look what you will be missing:

Thirty—or more—pulchritudinous damsels parading around the dance floor, first in evening gowns and then in bathing suits, the winner to represent the Nation's Capital in the Atlantic City beauty pageant during the week opening Labor Day.

Personality and charm, as well as physical comeliness, will be scoring points, according to the sponsors, and dancing, singing and dramatic experience will come in handy, too.

Keystoner Departs.

MACK SWAIN, movie pioneer of Keystone Comedy days, who died yesterday on the West Coast.

The finals are scheduled for Friday night, also at Chevy Chase Lake, and the girls who reach that stage will receive microphone tests at Station WOL.

"Miss Washington" will be bowed down with prizes of one sort or another, most of them donated by local merchants. Before leaving for Atlantic City she will be taken on a shopping tour in a brand-new sedan and after reaching the New Jersey resort she will be entertained for a full week, all expenses paid.

This year's local competition, first since 1933, has been indorsed by the Variety Club and other organizations. The judges, besides Nelson Bell (who may defy doctor's orders and dash out at the last minute in a display of good old Southern chivalry), are Guy Wonders, of the local Warner Bros. staff; Joseph Anthony Acheson, sculptor; Don Craig, dramatic editor of the News; Emile Beauvis, official of the Society of Beauty Parlors and Cosmeotologists of America; Joe Brown, who conducts tiny tots' radio programs, and Miss Madeline Ensign, of Station WOL.

Washington's "if" theater will be lighted again tonight, this time with George Bernard Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." The reference is to the Sylvan Theater in the Washington Monument Grounds, where the Community Players' performances go on as scheduled if it does not rain, hail or snow.

In this instance, "Androcles" will be given tomorrow night in case of rain tonight. Robert Halsted is directing and he's seen to it that there are martyrs galore. Howard Whitfield did the settings and lighting, Robert Reynolds and William Gochenour have charge of properties and Marjorie Beall is costume director.

Reminders: The Columbia Players are holding a membership meeting at 7:30 p. m. today at the Mount Pleasant Branch Library and invite prospective editors, directors, etc., to attend . . . Tryouts for "Peace on Earth," the New Theater Group's first production of the season, will be held at 8 p. m. at the Harrington Hotel . . . It will be "Press Club Nite" tomorrow for patrons of "East Lynne" in the National Press auditorium.

And take it from Capt. P. J. Barbour, master of the moonlight steamer Potomac:

Chesapeake Bay, at its greatest depth, is 156 (Hawkins, the old razor blades) and at the shallowest, 19.

The Potomac River maintains a depth of 20 feet to Washington.

Maryland has a bay shoreline of 3,000 miles; Virginia, 1,612.

Say, we wonder could this have been submitted as publicity for the Potomac's nightly excursions down the river.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Aug. 27.

DIRECTOR JOSEF VON STERNBERG will have completed "Crime and Punishment" before Marlene Dietrich begins work on her next flicker. There is much interest in Hollywood to see what Director von Sternberg will do without Actress Dietrich; also to see what the actress does without her director. The contest is on. Von Sternberg has gone to the post.

He had discarded his overalls and was directing in trousers and a shirt when I looked in on him last week. He worked in the same manner that he did while directing Dietrich, except faster. He gives the majority of his instructions quietly, politely, but firmly. There is generally a "Thank you" at the conclusion of a command. He doesn't shout often. He devotes much attention to the camera and to the lights. The big difference is that when he says "action" now, he goes into action.

• • • •

This is probably because Peter Lorre takes direction much faster than Dietrich. Director von Sternberg gives his instructions to Lorre in German, the same as he did with Marlene. Lorre was playing a scene with Marian Marsh. Von Sternberg, like most directors, likes to get in there and act. He would give his direction to Miss Marsh by playing the bit with her.

No set is as quiet as a Von Sternberg set. Stagehands do not sit about and talk while a rehearsal is on. They don't dare even whisper. It is odd to see stagehands and electricians practically standing at attention. A Von Sternberg set is as different as one of his flickers.

• • • •

HAROLD LLOYD is about to play a scene for "The Milky Way." A man with gray hair and a gray beard approaches Lloyd, takes a powder puff out of one of the pockets of the apron he is wearing, and pats the makeup on Harold's face.

The makeup man is Wally Howe. He is, I am informed, a fine actor. He plays bits and character roles, but whenever Lloyd is making a flicker, Howe discontinues his acting to become Harold's utility man.

Howe and Lloyd have a long association. It started back when Harold was doing the "Lonesome Luke" comedies. He has been with Lloyd in every flicker the comedian has made. He generally plays a bit in every one. As yet, Howe has not acted in "The Milky Way," but you can bet that he will be in it even if he only plays in a mob scene. Lloyd insists that he be in every flicker.

• • • •

Director Leo McCarey is ready to film the sequence. Harold Lloyd is at a party, and he is demonstrating to the hostess, Marjorie Gateson, what a great boxer he is.

Lloyd starts swinging wildly at Miss Gateson, and she must duck every blow. Lloyd tells Miss Gateson not to be concerned, that he is used to doing this stuff and will not smack her. Miss Gateson replies, telling Lloyd not to be concerned about her, that she knows how to duck.

The scene plays. Lloyd keeps swinging lefts and rights. Miss Gateson keeps ducking. Lloyd is not pulling the punches, and if one lands it is powerful enough to floor the gal.

It is really remarkable to see Miss Gateson duck. If Max Baer is as good as she is he'll beat Joe Louis.

• • • •

QUICKIE SHOTS: Joe Penner, Frances Langford, Lynne Overman having tea on the set of "Collegiate," while gag writers and the director are "in conference" trying to write in a gag in the supposed completed manuscript . . . Lily Pons endeavoring to act cute in the tiny studio apartment set of "Love Song." Director John Cromwell trying to show Miss Pons how to be cute. It is always amusing to watch a director play an actress' role. Director Cromwell was a prominent Broadway actor, and he likes to play a bit in the flickers he directs . . . There is a fight sequence in "Getting Smart," which is not astonishing news after you learn that "Getting Smart" is the new title of the play which delighted Broadway audiences, "Is Zat So?" . . . Roscoe Karns is the prizefighter in the flicker, and the fellow who does the fighting for Roscoe in the long shots is Eddie Borden . . . Eddie is really a manager of prizefighters—and he used to talk a great fight for his pugilists in Dave's Blue Room.

In a brave and laudable attempt to bridge the gap between the melodramas of the Elegant Eighties and the comedies of this modern era, the Roadside Theater Players last evening presented Bronson Howard's "The Henrietta," a comedy-drama of the early 1900's. Opening somewhat with indecision as to how such a transitional opus should be played, the company soon worked into a mixture of melodramatic exaggeration and modern straightness.

While such a blending of motifs did, in a manner of speaking, close the obvious, dramaturgic hiatus, it left something to be desired in the way of the continued and unalloyed hilarity that has heretofore been the hallmark of the Roadsiders.

In its composition, "The Henrietta" draws heavily from the old melodrama for its alternating moments of drama and comedy, presciently different by being clearly light and frothy in intent. Many a chuckle—even a lusty guffaw—is contained in the Howard lines, and the play does succeed in becoming a diverting revival of a passed era.

The individual members of the cast do not seem entirely at home in their roles. Not that there is any definite evidence of miscasting, for there is not, but rather was last night's performance done with a listlessness that comes from studied memory rather than from ineptitude.

Of the company, redoubtable Denis E. Connell was the outstanding performer, playing the irascible financial tycoon in his most polished Gillingwater manner. With Ann Ives playing opposite him, plus Robert Duke and Jean Smith, Richard Stringfellow and Lansing Hall, Ralph S. Fowler and Dorothy Dietz, many financial and amorous plots and counter-plots are developed and resolved, until the final curtain closes on four happy couples on the verge of wedlock.

Milton O. Hirshfield does reasonably well by a display of filial ingratitude and perfidy, Marvin Beers is sufficiently disappointed in love, John P. Rappolt, jr., is a good faithful aged clerk, and Ralph H. Thayer has his moments as a parson not averse to the allurements of Mammon.

"The Henrietta" was skillfully directed by Harrold A. Weinberger, whose handiwork should become even more pronounced when his players get the "feel" of the play. Three fine be-roofed settings were devised by Edith I. Allen, and Dorothy Croissant costumed the play in period charm.

CLAIMS, CLAIMS, CLAIMS! What remains to be said, when motor oils shout themselves hoarse with every word in the dictionary?

Well, here's the simple story of Esso Motor Oil. Read it—judge for yourself if it is worth trying—and then make the oil do its own talking.

This oil was put on sale at our stations and dealers without a word of advertising. No claims. No ballyhoo.

We knew what it would do. As the world's leading petroleum organization, we knew we had produced an oil that would hold its body better than any other oil.

We knew it would thin out less in hot weather, and thicken less in cold weather, than any other oil.

We knew it would hold its level in the gauge longer, protect your motor more completely, than any other oil.

But we made no claims. We put it out at 35¢ a quart to see if motorists would buy it—and then tell their friends.

In a few months, over a quarter of a million motorists tried this oil, and liked its performance so well that its sales exceeded estimates by 288%.

We had our answer. Esso Motor Oil had told its story.

Esso Motor Oil had succeeded—on its own—by its own character—without a word of advertising.

That's the way we want it to succeed with you. We ask you to give Esso Motor Oil a thousand-mile trial to test its outstanding performance. This oil speaks for itself.

Sally Milgrim Is Intrigued with the Roman Influence on Fall Fashions

Chic Costumes For Fall Wear Are Displayed

Shopper Has a Choice of Varied Fabrics, Styles and Colors.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

PERHAPS it was the faint tang of fall in the air. Or maybe the inspiration came from the dazzling array of fall splendor in shop windows. At any rate we started out with zest to do some real exploring in downtown stores. Efforts were well rewarded when we found an interesting bargain rack well out of range of the casual eye. Here hung tempting tidbits that would tease the steeliest budget.

First of all, corduroy suits for $6. And such suits! Jaunty ribbed skirts and tailored jackets, belted in after the latest vogue. Jersey suits, made in much the same style, and these only $6, too. (Remember, Jersey is a top number this season!) And then, there were those sporty wool suits with velveteen collars and scarfs. These for $8. With equal appeal to one's fashion instincts were the separate velveteen and flannel jackets, so smart with coarse tweedy skirts.

Bide awhile yet. As though this wealth of chic regalia was not sufficient, there were suede jackets, primed for campus wear, velveteen skirts—and, incongruously enough, long, dressy velvet skirts!

Besides the variety of fabrics, and styles, there was a riot of deep glowing colors, green, red and rust. Of course, the over-popular black was there, too.

Boudoir Slippers of Straw.

TOO MANY people no boudoir slipper even rivals the Japanese straw sandal in downright comfort and practicality. Certainly they have no rivals in price. A local store is displaying some which range from 19 cents to 29 cents. There are three styles, and goodness knows how many colors!

Such sandals make excellent bath and shower slippers. If you prefer your brocade mules, or leather slipperettes for bedroom wear, don't neglect to equip your bathroom with sandals for the greater convenience of the entire family.

Hatbands Featured.

EMPHASIS on color for the coming season has aroused unusual interest in many small details of dress which might add a bright touch to your costume. Hatbands for instance. One downtown store has a showcase given over to featuring these small, but necessary items for dressing up somber chapeaux.

They come in several types of ribbon, in dark red, rust, green, blue, purple and in combinations of stripes and checks. In the same department you'll find some interesting ribbon belts in numbers of novelty patterns. Prices on these items are way below par.

A Collar of Lacy Gold.

THERE'S SOMETHING about "golden neckwear" that sounds glamorous and thrilling. There's very definitely something about the looks of it that prompts romantic ideas. Made of fine glistening gold threads, and woven in web-like patterns, it's easy to believe the master Cellini might have designed it himself.

This alluring, rich "golden neckwear" is obviously just the thing to give the last word of chic to a dressy fall costume. Since elegance has become a byword for coming styles, and since rich colors and fabrics need rich trimmings, what could be more appropriate and more to be desired than a collar of lacy gold?

Cigarette Cases.

VOLUME cigarette smokers should give three hearty cheers for the plump cigarette cases on hand in a downtown store. Each of these chubby accessories holds not less than 20 cigarettes, ten on one side, ten on the other. When closed you'd hardly guess the phenomenal amount of room inside! They come in white, blue and red enamel, striped in gold. Yours for $1.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Designer for First Lady Tells Tricks of the Trade

SALLY MILGRIM.

No matter what your "figure problem" is there must be an answer to it. Sally Milgrim, designer for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, discusses her view of these questions in this, the second article in a series of interviews with outstanding American designers.

By Frances Mangum.

"MOST PEOPLE THINK designing hinges on one thing only, and that's creating clothes. Primarily perhaps, that's so. But if these clothes aren't flattering, if they don't correct physical defects—then they're just clothes after all!"

It was Miss Sally Milgrim speaking. For many years Miss Milgrim has held her place among leading American designers. She boasts a clientele which reads like a page from society's blue book. Best known of her clients is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Before I design clothes for anyone," Miss Milgrim said, "I study them as I would a painting. I must know what I want their clothes to do for them. What lines to stress and which ones to disguise. Then I employ all the tricks of the trade."

Miss Milgrim was sitting at her desk in her large gray and white workroom. A large piece of chintz was thrown carelessly across a sofa. Yards of imported materials were piled high on a table. A wire fitting form stood in one corner, and several large full-length mirrors hung on the wall. A group of her sketches were scattered across the desk. While she chatted she referred to them frequently.

Tricks of the Trade.

"These tricks of the trade," she continued, "include all the myriad of small things one must do to make a tall woman look shorter, a stout woman slimmer, and an hour-glass figure less hour glass."

As far as her personal preference is concerned, Miss Milgrim had just as soon design for tall women as short ones.

"Each individual has her figure problem," she said, "and it is up to me to work it out. How? There are so many ways that I could scarcely enumerate them all. Some would be too technical to explain.

"If my client is stout, I certainly would not use a bias skirt. This would only accentuate her figure. But briefly, here is what I mean: I would try to give an effect of straight lines, thereby creating an impression—or delusion, if you like—of slimness. On the other hand, if she is narrow waisted and broad hipped, bias skirts might be the very thing for her. Of course, it all depends on the individual figure.

"If this client is flat chested, I probably would use tucks, darts, and fullness in the top of her dress to make her figure seem well rounded."

Interested in Roman Influence.

The length of a dress, the lines of it, the way it is draped and trimmed are all very important in their effect on a figure, Miss Milgrim pointed out.

"In fact," she said, "what such details do for the dress is one thing, and for—or against—the figure, another.

Miss Milgrim is particularly interested in the Roman influence on fall clothes.

"I have just completed a dress which brings this out fully," she said. Going over to a large wardrobe which stood in the far corner of the room, she lifted out her newest creation. It was made of a soft, cool-looking fabric which she said was woven from flax taken directly from the King of England's plantation in England.

"When I designed this dress," she added, "I was inspired by the material—a kind of novelty linen. I guess you'd say. It was wonderful cloth to work with!"

Bracelets Displayed.

The dress was very plain except for a few extreme drapes and one golden clasp at the shoulder. Miss Milgrim displayed two gold bracelets which she said were Roman, too, and suited to the style of the dress.

"On hot September nights, when summer clothes look a little droopy, this will be fresh and cool and quite appropriate," she said.

This fall Miss Milgrim is particularly interested in dark reds, deep rich purples, and of course, black.

Black was always one of her pets, she said, because it was so easily and so successfully combined with bright colors.

Miss Milgrim never studied for designing, she said, but developed quite a flare for it when she was a child.

"I used to design dresses for dolls. As I grew older I designed them for myself, and still later I started out designing them for other people," she explained.

Evening Dresses of Leather Make Appearance in Paris

By the Associated Press.

PARIS.—Leather evening gowns and wraps gave the style world something new to think about in winter fashions when Alix showed her new 1936 collection.

The gowns were designed of soft leather almost as supple as silk covered with multicolored leather applications in intricate-cut patterns, as green, wine and blue on caramel beige. They were topped with matching three-quarter length wraps.

Daringly low decolletes slashed very low in front and open to the waistline in back marked some of the evening frocks, while others were designed with much higher decolletes.

The nighttime gowns followed two designs. Some were made of black chiffon or Panne velvet, knife pleated from decollete to hem and belted with ropes of seed pearls or gold cord. Others were fashioned of brown taffetta or white and silver lame with very great fullness in the backs of the skirts. Their belts were made of lapis lazuli and pearls or finished with turquoise studded silver plaques.

Buskins—something new in evening slippers—accompanied the gowns. They were designed of cloth of gold or silk studded with gems, and fit the foot like a glove. They had no heels, no soles except the fabric and were finished with pointed toes.

Day frocks were fashioned of wool jersey in tones of black, smoke blue black and brown. Draped bodices closely swathing the outlines of the figure and skirts with cartridge-pleated fullness in the back were the outstanding features of their designs. Many were trimmed with big round buttons of hammered copper and belts of braided raffia or pebbled leather.

Are There Any Gigolos in Washington? If So, Where and What Price? Asks Girl Who Wants to Go Dancing Just Once This Summer.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: No one has ever asked you about gigolos? Are there any in Washington? If so, where and what price?

During the past two years I have been on night work and my dates have gradually diminished. Being a native of Washington, my Saturdays and Sundays are usually taken up with visiting relatives and friends of the family. But I love to dance and would like to go to just one dance before the summer is over. Is there any way it could be arranged Thank you for any suggestions.

NIGHT SHIFT.

DEAR NIGHT SHIFT: "Gigolo . . . a paid dancing partner or male escort, as at a cabaret . . ." (politest definition of the species, as given by Webster's International Dictionary, second edition, 1935).

Impressed by the apparent sincerity of your terse opening questions (while doubting the wisdom of your willingness to employ the services of such a creature), I have made a sincere and organized effort to learn if there are any gigolos in Washington. But so far as I can learn, there are none—which may be just as well for you and all other unattached, rather recklessly lonely, and dance-loving women concerned.

• • • •

Perhaps my undeniable sense of relief is born out of unjustified prejudice. I have never known a gigolo, outside the pages of light fiction. Nevertheless I hold the conviction that if and when he exists he is apt to be a rather dubious specimen of mankind, whom the average woman would do well to avoid. I am also convinced there must be a better and more lasting solution of your situation than enlisting the services of a paid dancing partner.

• • • •

Telephoning about in search of a dancing partner for you, contacting only socially acceptable sources of supply, I learned these facts, which may be of interest:

The Young Women's Christian Association, with headquarters at Seventeenth and K streets, northwest, gives dances twice a month under the supervision of Miss Virginia Winfield, chairman of the recreation committee. Unescorted young women as well as unescorted young men attend these dances. Introductions are effected on request; but on the other hand every program includes a generous number of "Paul Joneses" to "mix" the crowd and do away with the necessity for making too many awkward forced introductions. There will be two such dances in September, one the night of September 13 on the roof of the "Y. W." building, and another the night of September 27, in the "Y. M. C. A." gymnasium. Admission is 50 cents and it is not necessary to belong to the "Y" in order to attend.

• • • •

You are cordially invited to stop in Miss Wingfield's office after Labor Day and take up your problem with her. I am told she is young, friendly, fond of dancing and entirely sympathetic to all who find themselves in your position. It was suggested there might be one or several young men living at the Y. M. C. A. dormitory who might welcome opportunity to meet a young woman who would be a personable dancing partner.

• • • •

I checked on this suggestion by calling the Y. M. C. A. The dormitory secretary, Mr. Floyd McTyier, is on vacation, but the man who is acting in his absence (a young man, judging from his telephone voice and his laughter) admitted there was some foundation for the suggestion. On the occasion of a recent sorority convention here, some of the young men were willingly "drafted" as dancing partners for visiting young women, and spent (he said) a most enjoyable evening.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Skirt of One-Piece Dress Gored To Give Smart New Flare

Pattern No. 961.

THE FALL SILHOUETTE is decidedly youthful and easy to wear. This one-piece dress illustrates perfectly these two qualities. The somewhat shorter skirt is gored to give the smart new flare. The slide-fastener closing, the school-girl collar, and the four pockets are young, but not skittish details.

Flat crepe, flannel, or sheer wool are suggested fabrics. A dark wine red with white silk or pique collar and cuffs would be a charming combination for a first fall frock. The pattern is cut in sizes 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 2⅝ yards of 54 inch fabric, and ⅛ yard for contrast.

Ancient's Favorite Dishes Are Described in Classics

Greeks Were Fond of Eels and Poet Antagoras Cooked His Own; Recipe for Parsley Pie, Popular in Middle Ages, Discovered.

By Pattie Ellicott.

ANCIENT AND MODERN literature contains frequent mention of foods. Thus through the centuries a literary Barmecide feast, as it were, has been set for book lovers, a table groaning with good things which never surfeit one and which tickle the palate without affecting the digestion.

Barmecide, it will be remembered, was that jesting Prince of Bagdad who put a succession of imaginary dishes before a beggar pretending they contained a sumptuous repast. The beggar entering into the spirit of this dietary game pretended to be intoxicated by the imaginary wine before him and fell upon he Prince.

The classics of the Greek and Latin by no means neglect food. Athenaeus, a Greek author, in his "The Deipnososphists," gives up page after page to fish and its edible comrades of the sea. And he quotes the gourmand Machon in an injunction to culinary experts that should be hung in the kitchen of every chef in the land. Machon declared: "I'm a gourmand; that is the cornerstone of our art. He who would not spoil the materials entrusted to him must have a passionate love of them. The cook who is mindful of his own taste will never be a poor one. Further, you can't go wrong when your organs of sense are clear. Cook, and taste often. Not enough salt, add some. Something else is required; keep tasting it again until the flavor is right; tighten it, as you would a harp, until it is in tune. Then, when you think that everything is by this time in harmony, bring on your chorus of dishes, singing in unison."

The Greeks had a great veneration for parsley and used it for the victor's crown at Isthmian games. This fondness for the herb persisted through many lands and through the centuries until now and we find constant reference to it in literature.

In books written in the middle Ages no waud then you run across mention of parsley pie. It sounds alluring and after a little search the following recipe was discovered:

"Lay a fowl or a few bones of the scrag of veal seasoned into a dish, scold a colanderful of picked parsley in milk; season, and add it to the fowl or meat with a teacupful of any sort of good broth or weak gravy. When it is baked, pour it into a quarter of a pint of cream, scalded, with the size of a walnut of butter, and a little flour. Shake it round to mix with the gravy already in.

"Lettuces, white mustard leaves, or spinach may be added to the parsley and scalded before being put in."

Millions of children since the days when dear old Mother Goose was written have chanted the enticing story of "Four and Twenty Blackbirds Baked in a Pie."

Sing a song of sixpence,
A pocket full of rye,
Four and twenty blackbirds
Baked in a pie;
When the pie was opened,
The birds began to sing;
Wasn't that a dainty dish
To set before a king?

How was that pie of four and twenty blackbirds made? History has forgotten to record the exact recipe.

Scholars as well as children have puzzled over those tarts eaten by the Queen of Hearts in the memorable rhyme:

The Queen of Hearts,
She made some tarts
All on a summer's day;
The Knave of Hearts,
He stole those tarts,
And took them clean away.

The preponderance of evidence and belief is that the queen made those tarts out of gooseberries. This has been a favorite fruit in England for centuries and probably while the queen had a plentitude of gooseberries there was little else in her garden out of which she might have fashioned her tarts.

Through English literature resounds another rhyme that was at one time a street cry on the morning of each Good Friday.

It ran:

One a penny, buns,
Two a penny, buns,
One a penny, two a penny
Hot cross buns.

In "The Book of Days," speaking of Hot Cross Buns the author stated:

"In London and all over England (not, however, in Scotland) the morning of Good Friday is ushered in with a universal cry of 'Hot Cross Buns!' A parcel of them appears on every breakfast table. It is a rather small bun, more than usually spiced, and having its brown surface marked with a cross."

Recipe for Hot Buns.

Hot Cross Buns can be made at home, it might be remarked, and a good recipe for them is the following:

1 cup very thin scalded cream
¾ cup brown sugar
½ cup butter
¾ teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk
1 yeast cake
1 tablespoon lard
2 cups whole wheat flour, sifted
½ cup raisins.

Mix one tablespoon sugar with cream and yeast cake broken in pieces. Cover and let stand 20 minutes. Add one cup flour mixed with salt. Cover and let rise. Cream lard and butter together and add remaining sugar. Combine mixtures and add enough flour to make stiff batter. Cover and let rise, add raisins. Shape into large buns. Place on buttered pan, cover and let rise. Brush with egg yolk diluted in one teaspoon of cold water. Bake in hot oven. Decorate top of each bun with cross of frosted sugar.

Mothers Told How to Handle Sulky Children

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

MRS. JONES is a very energetic mother, given to making decisions and carrying them out at a moment's notice and without any warning. For example, Tommy, who is 3, will be playing on the floor with his blocks. He is not half through with the house he is building. Suddenly his mother swoops down on him. "Time for bed, Tommy," and he finds himself whisked away, the next block to be laid still in his hand and his castle and dream shattered.

Of course he kicks and screams. Thus alone he knows how to make himself felt in the clutch of such an irresistible force. Bath, supper, bed are spoiled and his mother adds insult to injury by reproaching him for being cross. In fact, she scolds him most of the time for bad temper and rebellion. She worries about his intractability. He never wants to do anything, but takes a negative attitude toward life.

There are many cases of children trained in just this way to chronic sulks and opposition and their mothers remain serenely unconscious of the cause. It is hard for an adult to stop what he is doing at a moment's notice and turn his attention to something else. He at least can argue the mattor or can refuse to comply with the request. Even a half-grown child who can use the language fluently and who cannot be moved bodily has some "come back."

The very little child is helpless. Furthermore, little children are slow to grasp a new idea and slower still to put it into execution. If you ask a tiny tot to do something he generally turns the matter over in his mind for a few moments and then is apt to start moving very slowly.

A child, and especially a little one, should be given fair warning of an impending change.

Conserves Is Topic Of Recipe Contest Closing Saturday

"Conserves," the topic of this week's recipe contest, may be made of large or small fruits combined with nuts, raisins or maraschino cherries. If you haven't already sent your recipe in, submit one immediately. You might be one of the winners.

If you win one prize you will be eligible for another. This is the idea upon which the contest is founded. In addition to the 12 weekly prizes of $1 each, three grand prizes will be awarded at the end of September. The grand prizes are a Sunshine Mixmaster, a G. E. Hotpoint coffee maker, and a Dominion sandwich grill offered through the courtesy of the National Electrical Supply Co.

Recipes to be entered in the contest must be received not later than next Saturday morning. All entries should be addressed to Dorothea Duncan, home economics editor, The Washington Post, Washington, D. C.

The names of the prize winners and their recipes will appear in next Tuesday's edition of The Post and the new contest subject for the coming week will be announced at the same time.

Paresis Tricks Diagnoticians In Early Stage

Onset of Disease Insidious; Appears Between Ages of 40 and 50.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

DEMENTIA paralytica or paresis is one of the most distressing disease manifestations known to science, and it is with reluctance that we yield to a large number of requests and append a brief description of the condition.

The disease must not be confused with the type of dementia that sometimes occurs in old people who may have burned life's candle at both ends and who sometimes fail in mind before they fail in body. With these persons we would wish that, like the "one hoss shay," mind and body might crash together.

But paresis is different. It is not an old age disease but one that begins usually between 40 and 50, and strangely enough more frequently attacks those who have received a high degree of mental training.

Gradual in Early Stages.

In the early stages the onset is insidious; in fact, it may be so gradual as scarcely to be recognized. Occasionally the patient is catalogued as a nervous individual, suffering from some functional disorder, and it is only when unmistakable symptoms appear that the diagnosis of paresis dawns upon the examining physician.

In order to understand the symptoms, we must recall that the word dementia as herein used is not synomymous with insanity. It signifies the slow destruction of a mind that was once alert and keen. There is a gradual falling of mental faculties; an enfeeblement of the powers of thought. Judgment is lost, although there may be sporadic intervals in which a considerable amount of shrewdness is exhibited. The critical faculties are dulled, and there may be small lapses of social proprieties. At about this stage in the progress of the disease the patient may begin to show extravagances in the use of money. He behaves as though he were possessed of inexhaustible funds.

Brooks No Opposition.

No one can tell the patient at this time that he is ill. He insists that he feels fine and is fine. He manifests a peculiar sense of dominance, and will brook no opposition to his plans. In spite of himself, the paretic on examination will show rather striking mental symptoms. Judgment is weakened, and there may be grand ideas entirely out of line with the patient's ability to plan or to achieve their fulfillment. Among male patients these ideas take the form of wealth, power, glory, and position. The projects announced by these victims are far more stupendous than could possibly be carried out. As one writer put it: "Wealth is counted in worldsful of gold. The patient will bring the Pacific Ocean to the Rockies to make nature's largest waterfall."

Electric Heat Beneficial.

Remissions occur occasionally and may last several months, although there are a few authenticated cases in which remissions have lasted for a few years. During these periods the delusions disappear, the moods change, symptoms of confusion pass away; but sooner or later the malady reasserts itself, with entrance upon the terminal period. There will be remnants of the grand days, but usually the mind becomes hollow and vacant. As a rule the condition runs its course within a few years.

Recently marked amelioration has followed the injection of the malaria parasite for the purpose of bringing on a high temperature. This procedure, or the use of electric heat to maintain a temperature of 105 degrees F. or even higher, has been followed by considerable improvement in certain cases. Under this treatment some authors have reported remission of symptoms in from 40 to 60 per cent of their patients. Time will tell whether this decided change for the better is transitory or permanent.

On Leadership.

The great question raised by the depression for this country is not the survival of capitalism, but the survival of the American tradition. The great uncertainty, which the future is to solve, is whether the United States is to remain a federated republic composed of self-reliant and self-respecting individuals, or whether it is to become a totalitarian bureaucracy, exercising steadily increasing domination over every aspect of the lives of its subjects.

In the main, no doubt, the people will themselves decide. Nothing can stop the driving force of a vital nation, and nothing can revive the vital forces once they are spent. Leadership can not make a country's destiny. But leadership can, and should, within the inexorable limits, direct and regulate. It should, if worthy of the name, understand the national destiny, and know how to realize its highest possibilities.

Leadership, on the other hand, can unquestionably misguide, mar, or even—at great turning points, when the scales of fate are finely balanced—destroy. Witness Alcibiades, who possessed great charm and brilliant abilities, who exercised much influence over the youth of his day, but whose unprincipled and irresponsible character, in the words of Thucydides, "speedily shipwrecked the state."

We may now be at such a point. The United States is unmistakably undergoing a moral and to some extent an economic revival. The paralyzing fear engendered by the depression has now passed. The essential dignity and common sense of the American people are reasserting themselves. At such a time, a virile leadership in the true American tradition could accomplish much.

Such leadership is not exemplified by imposing a mass of uncoordinated measures upon a people who to a very large extent have little or no understanding of their underlying implications. Such leadership is not found in seducing great groups of voters by offering them 57 varieties of governmental subventions. Such leadership will not ask that the national birthright be sold as a mess of pottage in exchange for misleading phrases about the more abundant life.

With Congress adjourned another opportunity, perhaps the last, will be afforded to a leadership which seeks to see the wood as a whole, rather than as individual trees. The President has often said that he is ever anxious thus to obtain the picture in perspective. Now is his opportunity to reflect upon the value of the American tradition, while there is still time to save its essential virtues from irredeemable decay.

Leaving A Challenge Behind.

Senator Long's successful filibuster against the social security program cannot go unnoticed because it was the final act in the first session of the Seventy-fourth Congress. On several occasions during the last eight months the senior Senator from Louisiana has reduced the Senate to a state of impotence. But the spectacle of this one publicity monger defeating the will of the entire Congress, by a trick that every sincere legislator disdains, especially emphasizes the procedural shortcomings of the upper house.

As matters stand, the most important piece of legislation enacted by this Congress may be temporarily suspended because of Mr. Long's filibuster. The advocate of share-the-wealth plans has blocked the appropriation of funds that would put into effect relief for the aged, for the blind and for underprivileged children. He has demonstrated the insincerity of his concern for the helpless. More than that, however, he has emphasized a major shortcoming in the competence of the Senate to function as a modern legislative body.

It is to be hoped that the President will find a way to finance the Social Security Board until next January, so that its vital work will not be delayed. Part of the work-relief fund might logically be used for this purpose, if not forbidden by law. In fact, there are few uses to which this huge appropriation could be more appropriately put than the inauguration of a system that is intended greatly to minimize the need for direct relief. This plan, of course, depends upon the Comptroller General's interpretation of the law. If it is not legally feasible, the President may lend the Social Security Board sufficient personnel from other departments to get its program temporarily under way.

The problem of rescuing the Senate from the control of irresponsible politicians remains for the next session. When the House acts under "gag" rule, and the Senate is frequently left helpless because of the absence of any rules limiting its individual members, the serious business of lawmaking is too often reduced to burlesque. Thus the closing fiasco of its first session becomes a formidable challenge to the Seventy-fourth Congress.

The Seventy-fourth Congress.

Congress has on several occasions held longer sessions than that which closed Monday night. But it is questionable whether any Congreses has ever passed a larger volume of momentous legislation during a single session than has the Seventy-fourth.

When Congress assembled last January it was confronted by two major tasks: The extension of certain anti-depression agencies, and the enactment of a social security program. But the President unexpectedly sent one sweeping measure after another to Capitol Hill until a stupendous program of "must" legislation had been outlined. On frequent occasions Congress balked at this procedure. Yet in the end it accepted virtually every important Administration bill in form acceptable to the White House.

In some respects the session just closed stands out in sharp contrast to the previous assemblies piloted by the New Deal. The Seventy-third Congress was inclined to adopt anything the President suggested without asking questions or taking the trouble to analyze its import. The very first measure submitted to the present Congress — the work-relief resolution — provoked a long controversy. The Senate insisted on knowing how the Administration proposed to spend the $4,000,000,000 requested. After much delay it made a rather feeble effort to safeguard this gigantic undertaking against waste. But, as the sequel is showing, its amendments did not substantially change the haphazard character of the work-relief program.

Likewise the searching criticism applied to the utilities holding company bill, the AAA amendments, the Guffey coal bill, extension of the TVA and the revenue bill, in each case eventually collapsed. The majority power in both houses is absolute. The Administration maintains rigid control over patronage and has billions of dollars to spend largely at its discretion. In the circumstances the President's success in pushing his entire program through the legislative mill is not surprising.

When all of the handicaps under which they worked are taken into consideration, the independent thinking manifested by some members of both houses and both parties stands out in an encouraging way. Congress has not entirely overcome its depression hysteria. But it has made a start. Indeed, when some of its more constructive measures are held up against the existing background of distress and confusion they are seen to belong in the category of thoughtful law-making.

Foremost of these is the social security act. Whatever its shortcomings, this measure represents a careful, sincere and systematic effort to minimize the vicissitudes of life for those citizens who face the greatest economic hazards. This is no half-baked legislative concoction. Experience will doubtless point the way to essential changes, but as it stands the social security law must be regarded as a significant milestone of national progress.

Some fundamental improvements in the national banking system also have been made, although these are as much attributable to the criticism by Senator Glass as to the Administration's preparation. Constructive regulatory features of the holding company bill have been overshadowed by the vicious death sentence, but if the latter section is later eliminated the remaining provisions should serve as a barrier against gross abuses of the past. Considerable credit is also due Congress for the rejection of various inflationary measures, although a presidential veto was essential to save the country from the Patman bonus nostrum.

Other aspects of the congressional record are intensely discouraging. Representative Taber told the House a few days ago that expenditures approved by the present Congress, including permanent appropriations, reach a grand total of $10,350,000,000. This means, he said, "almost $7,000,000,000 of appropriations beyond the capacity of the Government to pay." In face of this situation the $250,000,000 revenue measure stands out as the tragi-comedy of the session. Congress has thoroughly aped the Administration's irresponsible attitude toward finances. Economies have been eliminated and new expenditures authorized without the slightest regard for the status of the Treasury. The situation is so bad that Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee recently felt called upon to "pray for Divine aid" to curtail outlays next year. It is perhaps permissible to remind him of the saying that the Lord helps those who help themselves.

For a time it appeared that Congress would be profoundly influenced by the Supreme Court decisions which emasculated the NRA and upset the farm bankruptcy and railroad pensions acts. But the impression made by the Schechter case decision was short-lived. In recent weeks legislators have again rushed "must" bills to enactment without regard for their constitutionality. Until the Supreme Court has handed down several decisions, therefore, it will be impossible to make a final appraisal of these attempts to deal with various economic maladjustments.

Through this wide labyrinth of new statutes one may look in vain for any truly consistent policy. On one hand, billions of dollars are being spent to stimulate industry and provide employment. On the other, penalizing yet ineffective taxes have been levied upon sources from which private employment must be expected to come. A foundation for social security has been laid. Yet the general New Deal program, with its apparently unlimited expenditures, is an obvious impediment to that stability on which social security must ultimately be based.

Congress could hardly be expected to avoid all inconsistencies when it undertook a legislative program of such vast proportions. After all, the Legislature has done little more than pass upon Executive proposals. The greatest weakness of the program it has enacted is the original lack of planning at the White House. A successful operation is scarcely to be expected when directed by surgeons working under conflicting instructions and in the dark.

Walther Schuecking.

The death of Dr. Walther Schuecking, the German member of the Permanent Court of International Justice, will doubtless give rise to fewer tributes in his own country than elsewhere. For the Nazi censorship can scarcely permit adequate estimates to be given to the work of a man who was deeply and often openly opposed to Hitler's whole philosophy of government, and who was ousted by the present regime from the directorship of the famous Institute for International Law, at Kiel University.

The name of Dr. Schuecking, however, will command world-wide respect long after a kindly oblivion has buried the Goerings and the Goebbels beyond even the reach of execration. He was not merely a great jurist and the author of many volumes, among which his brilliant analysis of the Covenant of the League of Nations will long stand out. He was also a courageous leader in the heroic effort to build a democratic German republic. As a member of the Reichstag from 1919 to 1928 he labored incessantly to bring about the better understanding between Germany and her conquerors which would have averted so many present-day difficulties.

Among the many independent actions which were a part of the career of this great German scholar, one has perhaps special interest for this country. When the Reich withdrew from the League of Nations he maintained his position as a judge of the World Court, making clear that this body must be regarded as entirely free from the national policies of the states adhering to it. That, he pointed out, was why American jurists are always welcome on the tribunal, regardless of the attitude taken by the Senate on American membership in the Court.

Youth And The Bright Medusa

She came, she saw, and she was disappointed! We refer to Sylvia Goodman, of Detroit, young winner of a week's trip to Manhattan on the merits of her contest composition, "What I Should Like to See When I Visit New York." Miss Goodman only used 400 of the 1,000 words allowed, but in them she managed not only to cover practically the entire city, but also the gamut of human emotions. She wanted, so her essay read, to walk with the "rather mad crowds," to ride the New Jersey ferry "with the wind sharp in my face," to stroll "nonchalantly" around Columbia University, and to "cry" as an ocean liner sailed for points unknown.

Miss Goodman's tastes are lyrical, to say the least. Feted visitors to what Whitman called the "city of spires and masts" are not often so concise. Mrs. Mahnkey, Missouri grandmother who was recently entertained in the metropolis after another cock-eyed contest, wanted only to shake hands with a New York policeman and obtain a model of a sailing ship. She realized both of these ambitions and felt that her trip was a complete success. Miss Goodman, on the other hand, feels that great expectations have fallen somewhat flat.

Perhaps the chief difference in the reactions of the two contest winners is due to their ages. White-haired Mrs. Mahnkey viewed the sights with the acceptance which is taught by years. She took New York as she found it—a city of tall buildings, hurrying crowds and sudden sun-light dappled streets. But Sylvia Goodman, with all the hopes, ambitions, and excitements of youth, went seeking a metropolis of tears and laughter and Walt Whitman moods. She wanted to capture, in seven days, the very spirit of the place.

Happily it will be many years before Miss Goodman realizes that it was not necessary for her actually to visit Gotham in order to do this. She is too young yet to know that the wording of her essay proved that she already had the "wealth of the Indies" within herself.

Elks In The Rain.

Washington has rather more than its fill of parades, but it has seldom seen one more decorative and entertaining than that of the colored Elks here yesterday. This was all that such a demonstration should be, which is to say that it was gaudy, gay, tuneful, and obviously enjoyable to both spectators and participants, regardless of the drizzle in which the demonstration started.

Much thought and planning had gone into this fiesta, and that, of course, was responsible for the order and ease with which it proceeded. But credit must also go to an intangible quality—the innate love of color and rhythm that is peculiarly the Negro's own. Theirs is an inborn knowledge of the symphony of hues and harmony.

And to their race also has been allotted the divine gift of laughter even amid somber surroundings. No parade, or people, can fail to evoke admiration when it is imbued with a spirit of gaiety natural even in the face of lowering clouds.

What a lot of us fear is that paying for this depression in later years will cause another depression.

Too many are content to live from hand to mouth; especially if it's Uncle Sam's hand.

Perjury Does Not Pay.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Year after year ruthless personal ambition and revenge, race prejudice, corrupt politics and industrial tyranny all play their part in taking the liberty and lives of innocent men. There is no way of estimating the number of cases in which, through perjured witnesses, our judicial system becomes the accomplice of these vicious elements.

After 18 years, John MacDonald confesses that he lied when he identified Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings and sent them to the penitentiary for the bombing of the preparedness parade in 1917. Mooney and Billings may yet be free, but no tardy regrets of perjurers can bring back Sacco and Vanzetti or make retribution to their families.

Perhaps no appeal based on justice can touch men and women of MacDonald's type, and they may feel no remorse for the wasted years and grief which they cause when they give false testimony and gamble on escaping. However, MacDonald's life since the trial might serve as a warning. There is no honor among perjurers, and those who bought his lies with threats and promises soon deserted him. Instead of enjoying wealth and protection, he has led a miserable existence of menial jobs, illness and poverty, harassed by fear of a prison sentence and pursued by those who demanded that he tell the truth.

Today, paralyzed and penniless, he talks of "righting the wrong," and his own wretched condition is the best argument that perjury doesn't pay. G. B. S.

Justice For Waitresses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For more than two weeks a want ad has been running in a Washington paper for young men and girls for counter and curb service. I know one girl who went to answer this ad and was told that no help was needed; that the object of the ad was simply to get applications.

One can only guess how many young people have paid car fare when they could ill afford to do it, only to be told that no work was available. The cruel part is the hope of getting employment being kindled in our young people and then disappointing them.

I have just been told by one of the waitresses in one sandwich shop that she works from 8 p. m. until 2 a. m., and is not paid a cent of wages, but must pay 20 cents out of her tips to a tray boy to wash her trays, and if she accidently breaks a dish, she must pay for it. This country will never have peace, happiness and prosperity until such inhuman practices have been abolished.

If my memory serves me right, there was a law in Washington requiring employers of women to pay a minimum of $15 a week. This law was declared to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court when the late Mr. Taft was Chief Justice. Why can't there be justice for all?

Investor Who Won't Forget.

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—The stock market is now telling owners of utility stocks the truth about the Wheeler-Rayburn holding bill. Utility stocks soared, in many cases, from 300 to 500 per cent when for a time it appeared the holding bill would not be passed with the "death sentence." But last week when it became certain that the bill would contain such a sentence, without exception they took a substantial flop.

I think this is the best reply that can be given to the assertions of Messrs. Wheeler, Rayburn, and their ilk, that investors in such stocks will not suffer.

I suppose now that holding companies are headed for destruction, those consumers of electricity and gas that holding company opponents in Congress have been yapping about, will shortly receive a 10-cent reduction in their $3 bills and that Messrs. Wheeler, Rayburn, etc., will be pointing to such as their great victory!

I am one of those stockholders whose good money is being taken away by destruction of holding company stocks and if other similar holders are like me, they will not forget Messrs. Wheeler, Rayburn, etc, hereafter on election days.

England And Italy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Answering "Italo-American's" views about the Ethiopian dispute: America could never share the views of Italy, because Mussolini is acting like a bandit. He is preying on a little country because he wants more territory, just like a gangster.

Nations that defaulted on loans have nothing to do with Italy's desire to prey upon Abyssinia. England has a right to protect her territory and citizens, in such a case, as this Mussolini, who appears to have a case of "big head." England has always been known for her justice; there is no other nation in the world who dispenses justice to all, black or white, of any creed, like Great Britain.

If "Italo-American" is so patriotic toward Italy, it is a wonder he renounced it, and more wonder he does not enlist to fight with "Muscle-in-oni."

Reply To Wishful Thinking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If your Tory-minded correspondent, A. E. Lewis, wishes to have his smug complacency about the basic principles of our present social system put to a test let him glance through Stuart Chase's article, 'The Parade of the Gravediggers," in the August issue of Harper's.

It is so easy for those of us to whom our established order has been reasonably kind to close our eyes and ears to unpleasant facts, or to try to confute them with a few stout-hearted platitudes. A familiarity with the half dozen profound studies digested by Chase leaves little room for that brand of wishful thinking in which so many poorly informed people are now indulging.

Mr. Henderson, of Falls Church, is right. Pegler is a joy. He adds distinction to The Post, which already was illumining the entire field of American newspaperdom.

Regarding Mrs. Gilman.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Friends of Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman may be glad of some additional facts in regard to her. A few weeks ago she wrote me a letter of farewell. She said she had had 38 happy years with Mr. Gilman; that on his death she had been left with "a tiny income," but enough to live on, and she had gone to California to end her days with her daughter and grandchildren.

When the doctors first discovered that she had cancer they gave her a year to live; but she had lived for three years and a half, keeping the disease in check by means of X-rays; and thus far she had not suffered. She added that she had now grown very weak; that the end was evidently near, and that she meant to hasten it with chloroform.

It may be a satisfaction to others, as it was to me, to learn that she had not previously endured years of suffering.

Prospects In Ethiopia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does Mussolini believe that he must meet the forces of Great Britain? He assuredly will, though this is not all. When his forces are in Africa, something may happen in Austria. When his ships of war are at Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, the Suez will be closed against his return. When his war planes start for Addis Ababa, a typhoon can scatter them to the "four winds of heaven" as easily as the Spanish Armada was sunk in the sea. When his armies need water, they may perish for the want of it! When his men would traverse the lowlands, malaria, dysentary, the tsetse fly may decimate them.

France is in a precarious position—she has a railroad from Djibouti to Addis Ababa, by which munitions must reach the capital of Abyssinia. She does not want to offend her cousins, the Latins: and yet, these same Latin cousins will attempt to seize Djibouti, to prevent munitions from reaching Addis Ababa; thus by an act of war, France will be compelled to side with Great Britain and Ethiopia, or she will lose French Somaliland.

Last Of The Singers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to express to you my appreciation of the tribute to William Watson in The Post of August 15. He was once one of my enthusiasms, and though the brightness of the enthusiasm may have dimmed, I still think of him as almost, if not quite, the last of the singers to whose song my ear and heart respond.

To a modern poet the following lines may not be poetry, but they bring to me what I ask of poetry:

True lover of the Past, who doest not scorn
To give good heed to what the Future saith—
Drinking the air of two worlds at a breath,
Thou livest not alone in thoughts outworn.

* * * *

Guests of the ages, at Tomorrow's door
Why shrink we? The long track behind us lies,
The lamps gleam and the music throbs before,
Bidding us enter: and I count him wise,
Who loves so well Man's noble memories.
He needs must love Man's nobler hopes yet more."

The Post Impressionist

The Spice Of Life.

Post Office, Wednesday.

WILL the introduction of the amateur to professionalism put new life into old vaudeville?

There seem to be certain portents of this devoutly-to-be-wished consummation. One of those portents the Post-Impressionist encountered yesterday.

What's your name?" we immediately inquired.

"'Dolphus," said the portent. "Well, 'course," he added, "it was Adolf to begin, but somebody cut off'n the front an' put that 's' on the end of it—I dunno why. An' my other name's Robinson."

He was a brown portent. He was a Negro boy with the brightest of eyes and with more gestures than an Italian lad—even less conscious of them than any Italian. 'Dolphus was one of those amateurs that Maj. Bowes presents weekly to the air and all too infrequently to the variety stage.

* * *

"But they won't let me work here in Washington," said 'Dolphus. He didn't complain; he merely stated a fact that puzzled him: "Sumpin' 'bout them child-labor laws. I'm 13, I am.

"I sing a lot," said 'Dolphus, "an' dance. Fust off, I sung—you know: home-like, an' at school, an' then church-bazaars. Well, come a fight at New Rochelle—that's where we live, New Rochelle. It was a lot o' fights, mostly featherweights, where they needed people to sing 'tween bouts, an' I got a job there: guess 'cause I didn't charge too much.

"I was kinda skeart—jes' sang low. Still, somebody must'a' hearn—I mean heard me—'cause a man sent me a note to come fo' a test, like; an' he was a radio-fella. So I went an' took it.

"Well, 'en I didn' hear nothin' six-seven months. Clean forgot it by that time, when 'long come telegram: 'Report my office fo' duty immejet.'

"An' didn't I go?

"They was a fella singin' ahead o' me; grown-man, he was, singin' like Pagliacci, only what he sung it was 'They IS no Death,' but he sung it ches' out an' arms flyin'—you know. I couldn't make that much noise. Still I tried. An' what if'n he got 1,200 votes in the fust quarter-hour check-up? I come right 'long after him with 900.

"So I was started."

"Father and mother living?"

"Sho' is—an' all the chil'en."

"How many are there?"

"Sebben."

"Some younger than you?"

"Lots."

"My father," said 'Dolphus—still just stating facts, never complaining against them—"had a good job once, an' we live' fine. 'En he hurt his foot, workin'. Got a lot o' 'demnity fo' it, an' we was cert'ly happy. But the 'demnity run out byenby, an' still he couldn't git no work no mo'. So I gotta work: fambly needs it.

"That's how I don't un'erstan' these here child-labor laws.

"I like to work, too," 'Dolphus continued. "I don't like loafin' 'roun' the way I gotta loaf here 'n Washington. 'Course I seen the Washington Monument, but I didn' go up it. An' I saw where Congress meets, but I didn't go inside: I figured mebbie they wouldn't lemme—un'erstan'?—er mebbe it'd cost too much.

"What I'd like to do would be see the Pres'dent," said 'Dolphus. "Some fellow says why don' I write a letter to the President an' ask him kin I see 'm. Gosh, I cert'ly would like to see 'm! Do you guess they'd lemme in? . . .

"I'd like to see the Pres'dent fo' himself," Dolphus ruminatively concluded; "but p'r'aps, ef'n I did see 'm an' jes' sing fo' him once—jes' free: not child-labor, you know—why p'r'aps he'd even fix it so's I could sing professional here in Washington."

* * *

'Dolphus was a hit in Baltimore. He ought to be a hit at the White House. From the spirit he showed yesterday—the flashing eyes, the thrashing gestures, the compelling smile—he ought to have a considerable future in vaudeville.

That form of variety was once, indeed, one of life's spices. Then too much attention was given to headliners, and none to the development of their successors. So little new talent of the first order has grown up during the past decade.

The Post-Impressionist is glad that at last a Major Bowes is putting new vaudeville talent on the air, and that motion picture theater-managers are giving Maj. Bowes a chance to put it on the stage.

We hope that there'll be more and more Dolphus Robinsons and Joe Becklers and—yes, even more housewife-sopranos. After all, whether a woman's place is or is not the home, the home is rarely the place for the soprano.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Republican Dilemma.

SCOTTS CORNERS, N. Y., Aug. 27.—Considerable indignation has been aroused in our little community away from it all—by a threat to build a macadam farm-to-market road 20 feet wide. William D. Shine, the town supervisor, a Republican, has been canvassing the neighborhood for several days trying to select a road leading from a farm to a market, according to the requirements of the Federal appropriation for this purpose. The citizens, however, have repulsed him in all cases, and not without some anger. William C. Jones, the township road supervisor, also a Republican, spent an entire day last week touring the back roads with an assistant State engineer, but was unable to find a place to put the road.

"It won't cost you anything," Mr. Shine has been saying to his constituents. "The money is there, and it has got to be spent for a farm-to-market road which must be made of macadam and must be 20 feet wide."

But practically all the farms are rustic abandoned farms. There are a few old apple trees which apple regularly every year of their own accord, but these are strictly amateur apples and not for the market. Some of the citizens are always intending to gather the apples and make applejack of them, but that takes time and trouble, and, anyway, nobody knows how. The only way to prevent an apple tree from appling is to chop it down, and our citizens do not like to do this because the trees give apple blossoms in the spring.

THE only market anywhere around is Ernest Schelling's Grocery Store, but he buys most of his merchandise from the wholesale markets, which buy it in New York. He does buy about 100 ears of corn a day, in season, from two of the old farming farms and about a bushel of spinach and a couple of dozen bunches of beets and carrots. But these two farms lie in opposite directions from the store. To be perfectly fair it would be necessary to build two 20-foot macadam farm-to-market roads at a cost of $100,000 apiece in order to facilitate the movement of 50 ears of corn, half a bushel of spinach and a dozen bunches of beets and carrots per farm per day for a few weeks per year. The question is: "Would it pay?"

The assistant State engineer told Mr. Jones that the Government had appropriated $7,000,000 for these farm-to-market roads in the county, and Mr. Shine, in pleading with the citizens to let him put in the road, argued that if we don't take it the money will have to be spent in some other township. Our citizens, like the teetotaler bartender who always takes a cigar instead, wanted to take the couple of hundred thousand dollars and use it for a school and, perhaps, a fire house in which to store the fire engine which now stands in Mr. Schelling's barn. But the appropriation says it has positively got to be spent for a macadam road 20 feet wide, which has got to lead from some farm to some market.

THE State engineer's man has been traveling constantly, covering 7,000 dirt roads in the county and peering into flower gardens to detect an ear of corn or a tomato which would bring the premises into the farm category within the meaning of the act.

But the citizens stoutly deny that their corn or tomatoes, if any, are professional corn or tomatoes and threaten to sell out and move to Vermont if the farm-to-market road goes past their place. They came up in the country to get away from it all, and they claim that the road would bring it all right past their doors. As a result, they would be pouring drinks at all hours of the day and night for people just out for the drive and never have a minute they could call their own.

Mr. Shine argues that the road which threatens the rural away-from-it-allness of our community would provide work for our citizens, but most of them haven't got time, as they have to go to the office every day. The rest are insensate, sorehead Republicans who are waiting for their investments to come back. They say their investments will do this as soon as the damn crazy Democrats quit squandering money.

Mr. Shine feels awful about it all, because it isn't every Republican that gets a chance to spend a couple of hundred thousand of Democratic money. Yet every time he asks anybody how about a fine 20-foot macadam farm-to-market road the dogs begin to snarl and bark, the children scream bloody murder and he gets practically ordered off the place.

Feeling is running high.

The Ancient World

By William Lyon Phelps

PROF. T. R. GLOVER, public orator of the University of Cambridge, England, and one of the leading authorities on the Greek and Latin languages and literature, has just produced a volume called "The Ancient World" (published by Macmillan, N. Y.), whose purpose is to make clear to the general reader, who may be unfamiliar with the classics, the social, political, artistic, military, domestic history of Greece and Rome. He intends it as a story of mankind, a history of men and women; in his own words, "the opening chapters of a story still being unfolded." He has comparatively little to say of battles and politics, being more interested in the way people lived in ancient times, and how they worked and thought and played.

• • • •

He begins with the days before Troy and a specimen of his style in dealing with the Trojan war and the Homeric poems will give my readers a good idea of how this book is written and for what purpose:

"Troy town, they tell us, covered roughly as much ground as New Street Railway Station in Birmingham, perhaps a little less; but, as the Greeks said, 'charm goes with the little.'"

When I stood on the ruined walls of Troy in 1932, I was astounded at the small size of the town, in comparison with its prodigious and eternal influence on the history of mankind.

• • • •

The story continues with Persia, Athens, Alexander, Rome, Hannibal, Rome's conquest of the world, Caesar, the four Gospels and the beginning of the Christian Church, and ends with the death of the Emperor Constantine in 337 A. D. There are many maps, lists of dates, and a good index. The whole work fills less than 400 pages and combines authority in learning with a readable style. And the book is filled with striking quotations.

"Sire," said Theodore Beza to the French king, "it belongs to the church of Christ, for which I speak, to receive blows rather than to deal them; but your Majesty will remember that it is an anvil which has worn out many hammers."

The French Position

Great Britain Now Champion Of League As France Stands Idly By.

As a correspondent for the "Paris Soir," Bertheron de Jouvenal, son of Henri de Jouvenal, senator and formerly French ambassador at Rome, is now visiting the United States. He has written for The Post two articles discussing the French position in the current European confusion. The first of these is published herewith; the second will appear in this space tomorrow.

By Bertheron de Jouvenal.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

MUSSOLINI wants Abyssinia. England, mindful of international morality and of her national interests, wishes to stop him. Can she do it merely by stamping her foot? No. Mussolini will call her bluff. He knows the British people will not easily be persuaded to go to war single-handed over Lake Tsana or Article X of the Covenant.

The situation would be very different indeed if England were not alone in her foot-stamping manifestations, if some other great power would join in threatening Italy. Then Il Duce might feel he was taking too big a chance by pursuing his course in the face of such opposition.

What other great power could help England to force Mussolini to keep peace? France. Why doesn't she? France has ever insisted that Article XVI is the most important article in the Covenant of the League. It is the article which provides for collective sanctions against any country committing an act of agression. In his ringing tones, white-haired Paul Boncour has many times shouted from the platform at Geneva: "As long as you are not willing to promise that you will, in the event of an aggression, bring your forces, military as well as economic, to bear against any nation attacking any other, you will not be making a real contribution to the cause of peace."

• • • •

AT whom were these remarks aimed? At the British delegates. They were the backward ones. They were unwilling to pledge the whole force of the British Empire to the defense of peace. Time and again they were reminded that the war of 1914 would have been averted had they, in time, said: "We will not tolerate this agression." France, on the other hand, was the willing soldier of the League, and the full weight of her great military array would fall heavily upon any aggressor.

How is it that the whole picture has so suddenly altered? Now England shows herself willing to take up the cudgels in favor of League of Nations principles while France remains very modestly in the background.

No doubt Britain's eagerness is due in part to her stake in Ethiopia. The road to India might be cut by the Italians, the source of the Nile would be in Italian power, if that country conquers Abyssinia. And French hesitation is also partly due to the fact that she has no stake in Ethiopia. But the attitude of France takes more explaining than that.

It is bewildering that a country famed for logical thought should not see the implications of her present passivity. If Italy, as was the case with Japan four years ago, is allowed to carry her aggression to a successful termination, with little or no interference, Germany will feel that the principles of international morality set at Geneva were just so much smoke. She will think gleefully that other nations will do unto France as France did unto China and Abyssinia; will let her be invaded without answering her calls for help, however, legitimate.

Thus Germany will be encouraged to use force against France at the first favorable occasion.

• • • •

SURELY, there must be powerful reasons for France to take an attitude which seems so little in harmony with her most obvious interests. What are these reasons?

They are both moral and material. Undoubtedly Italy is not behaving according to the standards of international morality agreed upon at Geneva. According to the Geneva creed and to Article X of the Covenant, no state should threaten the "territorial integrity or the political independance of any other member state." Well and good.

But England and France built their empire with little respect for either the territorial integrity or the political independence of the states they absorbed. It does seem a little hard on Italy that she should not be allowed to build an empire by the same methods, just because a few years have elapsed and Abyssinia has inconveniently been made a member of the League. The French are not prepared to relinquish their empire, built by the use of force. It follows that they are not in a strong moral position to forbid Italy to proceed in her Abyssinian venture.

Mussolini has explained to French visitors why he wants Abyssinia: "To be sure the country is teeming with minerals which we Italians lack. But that is not what I most want. I need Abyssinia to give my people the frontier spirit which made America what she is. There was always in America a fringe of pioneers living an adventurous, dangerous life, making rich new States out of deserts. That pioneer fringe communicated to the whole American nation the sort of spirit I want my nation to have * * * I want Italy to have its pioneer fringe in Abyssinia."

Now, the French nation of today is utterly lacking in frontier spirit.

Public Views Mussolini's Program Tolerantly With Eye To Past.

But it is not, and especially the youth is not, out of sympathy with a leader who wants to build just that spirit.

• • • •

BOTH Mussolini and Hitler have continuously asserted that theirs are young, unjustly trammeled nations, needing outlets for their overflowing numbers and surplus energies. Gradually that thesis has unconsciously been accepted by the general French public. "Maybe, if we had no colonies of our own, we'd be doing just what Mussolini does," thinks the average Frenchman, shrugging his shoulders.

Such tolerance of an immoral aggresion would not have been possible seven years ago, when the Kellogg Pact was launched. Then, the French felt that they stood for justice, were the champions of justice in the world. Contracts, treaties, covenants, had to be honored. But foreign critics, and then French observers reproducing the remarks of the foreign critics, asserted that the country stood stanchly by contracts, treaties and covenants only because all these were favorable to her.

This was far from being entirely true. The French like legal documents. And they like to honor them. But the issue of the debt to America intervened. Enraged by their inability to force any further reparation payments from Germany, the French Parliament stopped payment to America. Breaking a written agreement in a legally unjustifiable manner.

Public opinion was then made aware that France did, on accasions, fail to keep her written word, and the country's belief in its own righteousness was badly shaken.

To sum up: France is not swept with indignation at Mussolini's morally unwarranted aggression, because that wise old country looks back upon its own failings and wonders whether it might not, if it were also young and deficient in national resources, commit just the same crime. Thus public opinion. As to the leaders of the country, they have many concrete immediate reasons for not wanting to stand in Italy's way.

Tall Tales From Cape Breton

INGONISH, Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia.—Every day in the Sydney Post-Record they print three columns of Gaelic, including lessons in which you learn that "Co tha aig an dorus?" means "Who is at the door?" The section is headed with some gurgling words which signify: "Gaelic, the Language of the Garden." To express, I suppose, the local tradition that Adam and Eve spoke Gaelic in the Garden of Eden. But all opinion is not so orthodox—one old character remarked: "That's why the Lord kicked them out."

If so, their descendants came to Cape Breton, with a way-stop in Scotland. You will not find so many Highlanders outside of County Perth as they have up here between Judique and New Aberdeen—tall, stalwart people, "big, husky, and all heart" as they say. And intensely proud of their lineage and tongue. The storekeeper over near Horn road, who directed me to Louisburg, could not have spoken a thicker and more original Scots if I had found him in Ballaculish in the lee of Ben Nevis itself.

And the Cape Bretoners maintain, just as stoutly, that they have no dialect. They speak, they say, purer English than Oxford. And when it is Gaelic, which is still the only language in the back hills, you get the Caledonian music itself.

Very seldom are the strains mixed, as in the story of McKinnon, fresh from the isle of Muck, who had only a hatful of English with which to inquire if his ram had got into the Reverende Miller's pig pasture. "Morning good to you, Mr. Miller," he said. "Did you saw a bull sheep in your pasture's pig?"

The minister understood, and said "Yes."

A broad smile broke over McKinnon's face. "Well, that is she," he declared. Proving that the Celts and the Gaels, under the skin, are one.

I make it no especial point on the Scots temperament that the master of one house where I stayed near here (he was, by the way, a member of Parliament—Provincial), owned a lobster cannery in which he had a machine for removing the meat from lobster legs—a feat of delicacy which I can scarcely credit.

• • • •

THERE are a few French on the island, mostly near Grand Etang and Cheticamp, on the west coast. As the Cape Bretoner said: "We have no Protestants here—just Catholics and Presbyterians." But the greater part of the inhabitants—making due allowance for those of exemplary rearing—are such Scotsmen as the long boy from a northern county, who was one of those who came down to enlist during the war in such numbers that the province had to get out an order in council to retain men in the coal mines. He was being trained at Baddeck for the army, but so awkward and obtuse did he seem that the sergeant major of the Cape Breton Highlanders blew up completely. "In the name of heaven, man, did you never see anything but oats and sheep? Have you never been off the island?"

"Yes, sir, I was off once."

"Where?" demanded the sergeant major.

"Up a tree, sir!"

SUCH are the tales they tell up here. But the best of all concerns a certain Angus MacAskill, better known a century ago as the Cape Breton Giant. You must allow that Angus was one broth of a boy. Seven feet 9 inches he stood in his socks; he was 3 feet 8 inches across the shoulders; the palm of his hand measured 12 inches by 6, and his boots, one of them still extant, were 18 inches long. And he weighed 500 pounds, all muscle and no fat. If to you, like most people in Washington, figures have grown misty and meaningless, know that his coffin would have floated three men across the Bay of St. Anns.

He smoked a pipe holding one-sixth pound of tobacco, and drank whisky from a wooden dish called a tub which would hold three glasses. His grasp could encompass a pound of tea leaves. When a visiting bully teased Angus into trying a fight, Angus replied mildly: "Let's shake hands first." Then he squeezed the blood out of the visitor's finger tips.

The natives were less rash—they had seen Angus take an American sea captain, weighing over 300 pounds, and toss him completely over a wood pile 10 feet high and 12 feet across. Once, though, they thought they'd have a joke. A crowd of men and Angus were hauling a heavy fishing boat ashore, and the men chuckled over the notion of suddenly pulling one way when Angus was pulling the other. It didn't seem quite so funny when the boat split in two from bow to stern and Angus alone dragged his half up the beach.

And if that isn't enough, the tale is solemnly told that once in New York, where he was touring with Gen. Tom Thumb (who would dance on the palm of his hand), Angus shouldered and carried around a 2,700-pound sea anchor. To be sure, they say he hurt his shoulder when he threw it down.

And I hurt my throat.

Young Republican.—Good morning!

Lady of house.—Good morning! What is it, please?

Young Republican.—I am here to interest you in . . .

Lady.—I don't want anything today.

Young Republican (getting his foot in the doorway).—I'm not selling anything, madam. Let me explain my business. I am here on a mission of vital importance to every American.

Lady.—Every day somebody asks money for those missionaries. I'm fed up with 'em.

Young Republican (somewhat exasperated but still resolute).—Madam, yours is a priceless privilege, the right of suffrage . . .

Lady.—Honest, I don't want any. Try the people next door.

Young Republican.—You have the ballot. What are you doing with it?

Lady.—Oh, I know now! It's one of those popularity contests!

Young Republican (a little groggy).—I do not refer to that kind of ballot. I seek to interest you in a greater ballot, in a ballot vitally affecting the lives of uncounted millions, a ballot that . . .

Lady.—That's what the feller said who was trying to get votes for Clark Gable in that movie contest. I'm not interested.

Young Republican.—You do not understand. I am here as a member of the party of Abraham Lincoln, the party of William McKinley, the party of Calvin Coolidge, the party of . . .

Lady.—If you're a book agent with one of them albums with the lives and pictures of great Americans, you're just wasting your time.

Late Revelers Join in Gayety At Hangar Club

Last 24-Hour 'Port of Call' for Washington Boasts Untiring Orchestra.

By Chanticleer.

Late night throngs are beginning habitually to add to the festivities at the Hangar Club, Washington's only 24-hour "port of call" for revelers.

Traffic across Highway bridge booms after cabarets in Washington close for the night. At 2 a. m. all roads lead to the Hangar Club.

Once within its portals visitors think nothing of dancing till daylight. The fast-moving orchestra holds forth from 9 p. m. until 6 a. m. Those who get too much champagne in their hair often hang around until the Airport pool (same management) opens.

Bill Levy, major-domo of the Hangar Club, is perhaps best remembered as the one-time press agent who plastered local newspaper offices with invitations to a swimming party (nobody went near the waterrrrrr, Nellie) and warned his guests:

"We'll be insulted if you give us any publicity."

• • • •

If you're interested in noise you should put the Dude Ranch, along the Baltimore boulevard, on your itinerary tonight.

The boys at the Ranch are going to ride the broncho or somepun tonight in celebration of the birthday of their host, Milton Barrett. The guests will be supplied with horns, confetti, metallic hats and the other accoutrements of a real party.

New acts have been billed. Included will be the Ryan Twins, Dolly Dare, the blues singer with tears in her voice, Dick Bae and Jimmy Staley, radio singers, and the Crystals, a dance team once with the Follies.

• • • •

Portia Portar, the girl bull fighter, who, when not waving a red flag, waves a comely pair of hips on the nearest ballroom floor, will be the big attraction tonight and the rest of the week at Shoreham Terrace.

Just back from Mexico City, 18-year-old Portia has built up a following here in record time.

At the Shoreham for a third week are St. Clair and Day, ballroom dancers, who will sail next month for an engagement at the Palladium in London.

• • • •

Last night was a memorable occasion for the Cotton Club. The attraction was, as prize fight announcers would put it, none other than Joe Lewis, the boy with the trained fists.

It became sports night in a big way when Jesse Owens, the renowned Negro track and field star, appeared to see and be seen.

Al Barkley and his fellow musicians of the Maryland Club Gardens orchestra, the New Yorkers, have a problem on their hands.

We envy them too. Their puzzle is how to get their minds on their work while lovely Bobby Barnett cavorts about the platform to the tune of "Beautiful Lady." My friends, just in case you hadn't heard, she's the Sally Rand of these parts, a fan dancer who is adroit at all the tricks of her trade.

• • • •

Matt Windsor is back in town.

All of which means his new club, the Volga Boatman, soon will be opened in the old quarters of the Club Michel.

If by any chance you have forgotten (well, we didn't know either), Matt used to be the Russian accordionist at the Troika. His nationality at the moment? O, that's another question.

• • • •

Some night when you want to cool off you should take a spin down the Mount Vernon highway and look over the River Bend, the most popular resort in that neck of the woods. Country dinners are their specialty.

And their orchestra is to be reckoned with. George Reese is the leader.

• • • •

Another spot now drawing its share of patronage from the gourmets is Griffith Farms, the 100-acre estate located 3 miles beyond the District Line on the Marlboro pike out yonder in Maryland, as the natives say.

An Hawaiian orchestra plays every night. A seven-piece band is called on every Saturday.

• • • •

They're already talking about what the drawing cards will be when the Club Habana reopens this fall at its new Connecticut avenue rendezvous.

Frank Flannigan, Anthony Alongi and Jimmy Bright will be among those on tap.

• • • •

They have a versatile orchestra these days at the Rainbow room of the Hamilton Hotel. Four of the five members can play the violin. They also double on other instruments occasionally. The orchestra members got their start at the old Chanticleer.

Alfred Latell and Sylvan Dill are the current comedy headliners at the Lotus Restaurant. Latell steps out of character (?) and imitates a dog. Just a cur, Al. But a red-hot dog at that—Bonzo—once in Ziegfeld's Follies.

Howard Ott Marries Miss Dorothy Palmer

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 27.—Miss Dorothy Palmer, of Chambersburg, and Howard Ott, of McConnellsburg, were married yesterday morning at St. John's Reformed Church, the Rev. W. R. Gobrecht, D. D., officiating. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, after which Mr. and Mrs. Ott left for a wedding trip. They will live in Washington.

The bride is a teacher at the Pennsylvania Soldiers' Orphans School, at Scotland, and the bridegroom is a landscape architect with the National Park Service in Washington.

Discovering America
With Maxine Davis

Gary, Ind., Aug. 27.—Gary is certainly a changed town.

Two years ago when I was here the air was ominously clear and blue, and the nights lighted only by the stars. Today the smokestacks belch their black smoke, and in the evening the steel mills show red against the sky. Men in denim hung around filling stations and lunch carts then, puzzled, questioning, and Gary business men were harassed. That's all changed, too. Workmen hurry to the steel mills with purposeful steps, and white-collared men sit around restaurant tables at noon comparing fish stories and criticizing the Administration.

What's happened? I asked H. B. Snyder, for 25 years editor of the Post Tribune, Gary's newspaper, and this is what he tells me:

There were 13 banks in Gary. Twelve closed. Now people trust the one that's left.

Production in the mills, on which the town exists, went down to 15 per cent, and now its up to 55 per cent. Because of the shortened hours, employment is above that, and executives are beginning to worry about a shortage of skilled labor, if orders pile up.

Better Times Seen.

"You know, times are better," Mr. Snyder said, "because people have stopped talking about the depression. I usually lunch where I meet half a dozen or so business men. A couple of years ago they discussed nothing else; today they josh about golf, and the hot weather, and local politics.

"Most firms that could go on the rocks have failed so long ago that nobody has to worry about them any more. Home mortgages that were going to be foreclosed have been, so people aren't damning the banks or the building and loan associations.

"Last Sunday we had the first lot sale in Gary since the depression. A company promoting a subdivision of half-acre lots sold 15, far more than they expected, and got about $350 cash, about 30 per cent of the purchase price.

"There's a changed attitude toward the Administration in Washington, too. For a while, because we were so fed up with Hoover's static habits, we wanted action, and we were emotional in our enthusiasm for the President. We didn't care what he did. We were for him as long as he gave us action. We were unanimous about it.

"Now I hear people losing faith in mere action. They want some results. I notice a change everywhere. Mill workers ask questions. Store keepers criticize. The barber orates. Time was when nobody dared to speak adversely of Roosevelt. If you didn't like anything that went on you had to blame it on Moley or Tugwell or Ickes, or some one of the Brain Trusters. Now they blame the President for any and every thing.

Workers Ungrateful.

"Men out of jobs aren't thanking him for relief. They figure he owes it to them. Most of the unemployed in this town would rather work, and they're coming to blame Roosevelt when they can't find work. But when they do go back to the mills do they credit him for it? Not at all!

"And the people with incomes are often provoked at the relief costs."

In fact, Mr. Snyder feels that if there were a vote today, Lake County—that's Gary—would probably go Republican. And he ventures this prophecy:

"Where four months ago I would have said that unless there was a tremendous change, Roosevelt would be re-elected, I believe now that if Republicans adopt a good liberal platform and if they nominate a good candidate, of the type of Borah, they'd have a chance to win."

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 27.—A number of representatives from Cumberland will attend the quarterly conference of the Tri-State Association of Peace Officers September 27 at Connellsville, Pa. Approximately 200 representatives from member organizations in this section are expected to attend.

The membership of the organization embraces district attorneys, prosecuting attorneys, sheriffs, county detectives, police chiefs, railroad police and other peace officers in the tri-State area. William A. Huster, of Cumberland, State's attorney, Allegany County, is president of the associatoin.

Faces Homicide Charge.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 27.—George A. Bolling, fireman at the High street plant of the American Hardware Co., will face a charge of homicide as the result of the death at Petersburg Hospital yesterday of Thomas Edwards, colored truck driver for the firm, whom Bolling is alleged to have struck during a recent argument. Bolling will be given a hearing as soon as Dr. E. L. McGill, city coroner, conducts an inquest.

Checker Tournament.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 27.—More than 100 Virginia checker players will participate here Monday and Tuesday in the State checker championship tournament. Talmadge Phillips, president of the Virginia Checkers Association, is arranging details for the event, which will be staged in the Young Men's Christian Association.

Candidate to Be Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 27.—The county Democratic committee of Franklin County will meet Monday to nominate a candidate for commissioner of revenue to succeed J. H. Tyree, who died at Rocky Mount the day after the primary at which he was renominated.

A Valuable Weapon.

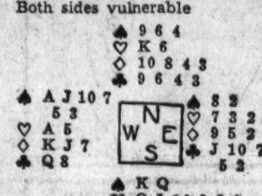
Ever since the earliest days of Auction the pre-emptive bid has been a subject of considerable controversy. Judiciously used, there is no question that the pre-empt is a valuable weapon, because if it does nothing else, it robs the opponents of valuable rounds of bidding. This is particularly true when the pre-empt is made on a hand weak in defensive possibilities and strong only in one suit. Then the opponents who may well have the strongest combined hands are sometimes unable to show their strength or reach the best declaration.

The Trap Pre-empt.

Expert players make their truly pre-emptive bids on weak holdings more effective by occasionally bidding a pre-empt with a strong hand. There is danger in this, of course, because the pre-empting side may miss a slam. Generally this high opening bid with a strong hand is confined to occasions when partners has already passed.

Knowing West was the type of player who hated to be preempted enabled South to trap him in today's hand.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4♡(1)	4♠(2)
Pass	Pass	Dbl.(3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Far too strong in honor-tricks and outside strength to consider pre-empting except as a trap and only then after partner had passed.
2—West nibbles at the bait.
3—The trap is sprung.

The Play.

North opened the King of hearts and West, who could never reach dummy to lead diamonds from that hand could not avoid losing three tricks in that suit in addition to his losers in spades, hearts and clubs, being set four tricks for 1,100 points.

Aggressiveness is generally a good thing in Contract, but against pre-emptive bids it is a failing rather than a virtue. There are certain times when a pre-emptive bid "fixes" the opponent who has a strong hand. In such cases, it is better to pass and be fixed than bid and risk a severe penalty. Actually, South could not make four hearts, having to lose a spade, a heart and two diamond tricks.

Two Hit-Run Deaths Laid To Virginian

Traffic Toll Rises to 3 Within 24 Hours in Old Dominion.

Marine Dies After Cycle Crash; Girl Companion in Critical Condition.

By the Associated Press.

Death of a Smithfield merchant yesterday brought the 24-hour total of traffic fatalities in Virginia to three, as Richmond police held a man they said was responsible for previous crashes that resulted in the deaths of two pedestrians.

R. Sydney Cox, manager of the V. W. Joyner Co., at Smithfield, was killed at 7:30 a. m. Tuesday when his coupe crashed into a pole on the Suffolk-Smithfield highway.

A fractured skull received when he fell from a speeding car on the R. E. Lee bridge over the James River in Richmond Sunday night brought death at 3:15 a. m. to Gilmer Gordon Garland, 32, of Richmond.

Driver Arraigned.

Herbert F. Hobby, 40, of Richmond, was arraigned Monday on charges of driving while intoxicated, but the case was continued pending the outcome of Garland's condition.

John T. Purtle, Marine, stationed at Quantico, died at Memorial Hospital, Richmond, of injuries received when the motorcycle he was operating Sunday crashed into an automobile.

Miss Emma Hamelsley, 17, of Richmond, who was thrown from the motorcycle while riding with Purtle, is still in a critical condition.

Hit-Run Charge Made.

Traced, police said, by a damaged automobile found in a Richmond park, James J. Bowles, 30, of R. F. D. 1, was held as the suspected driver who struck down Hubbard A. Sprouse, 24, on Hull street road early Sunday and failed to stop. Sprouse was killed.

Richmond police later said their records showed Bowles was the same man who skidded through a safety zone in Richmond on March 5, 1932, inflicting fatal injuries to William H. Traylor, jr. The records showed he was released after being charged with driving while drunk and involuntary manslaughter, but later was convicted of a charge of driving while drunk.

Charlottesville Club Pushes Street Widening

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 27.—A resolution recommending that $31,000 recently allocated for improvement of State highways within the city be used for the widening of West Main street, passed by the executive committee of the Young Men's Business Club, will be sent to the city council within the next few days, Armonde Paxson, president of the club, said today.

In addition to recommending the work on West Main street, the club urges preparation for the extension of the "white way" to the university, suggesting that "the proper agencies install adequate cable facilities to provide for the extension at such time in the future as may be practicable."

School Board Delays Selection of Assistant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 27.—Selection of an assistant superintendent of schools for Berkeley County was indefinitely postponed by the county school board last night when it was deadlocked over Edwin Miller, principal of Martinsburg High; E. E. Church, of Parkersburg, former Martinsburg High principal, and Kirkland McKee, of Randolph County.

Earlier in the summer the board voted not to name an assistant, but reversed this decision three weeks ago. Since then, however, members have not been able to agree upon an appointment. School starts September 3.

Burned Packing Sheds Will Be Rebuilt Soon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 27.—The packing sheds of the North Garden Fruitpacking Corporation, destroyed by fire late Saturday night, will be rebuilt at once, according to Percy Hudson, secretary and treasurer.

The building was a two-story frame structure, 150 by 250 feet, and was erected in 1928 by 32 fruit growers of the southern end of the county. The loss was estimated at between $12,000 and $15,000. It is partially covered by insurance. Four box cars on a Southern Railway siding also were destroyed.

Franklin Expects 100% Gain in Peach Crop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 27.—The peach crop in Franklin County will be twice that of last year, orchardists believe. More than 200,000 bushels of peaches are expected to be harvested in the county during the next two weeks. The fruit is of the best quality in years, according to growers.

Hundreds are employed in the orchards and packing sheds. At one place peaches are being packed at the rate of five carloads a day.

Zero Hour Set For Play War Of Third Corps

Troops Bivouacked About Indiantown Gap Ready for Sunrise Attack.

By Phil Austensen.

A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Reckord, Mount Gretna, Pa., Aug. 27.—Bivouacked in the general vicinity of Indiantown Gap the Third Corps, tonight under "war" conditions, awaited the zero hour for an attack.

Communications from Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, commanding the First Field Artillery, operating in the Pine Camp, N. Y., area, revealed that the Eighth Red Division is in defensive position protecting the right flank of the Red Army and covering its withdrawal to the Susquehanna River.

Gen. Nolan directed Maj. Gen. Robert E. Callan, commanding the Third Corps, in reserve as part of the Nation's largest peace-time maneuvers, to destroy the Red Division.

Intelligence has reported to Gen. Callan that the Red Army division is occupying the high ground in the vicinity of Harpers Tavern with the land organized for defense, both frontal and in depth.

The commander of the Third Corps then directed the commanding generals of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth National Guard divisions and Regular Army units to converge on the enemy territory.

As rain clouds emptied their burden the Twenty-eighth Division moved from its camp at Indiantown Gap to a bivouac area in the vicinity of Walmer's Church—Dornersville. The Twenty-ninth Division, by motor transport, moved from Camp Reckford at Mount Gretna, some 20 miles away, to bivouac in Belle Grove area. Aviation of both divisions was directed to support the ground troops.

After midnight the camp was under war conditions, with strict orders against lights, noise and loud talking. The attack was set for just before dawn. The ground troops will cross Swatara Creek on pontoon bridges constructed by the 103d Engineers and advance on enemy positions by aid of compass. The advance will be supported by artillery.

This is the first time the divisions have operated in a higher echelon since the World War. The exercises are expected to be especially valuable to hte corps officers, who have their first opportunity actually to use troops in working out a problem.

The night will be made light by flares dropped from blue airplanes, which will fly all night in defense reconnaisance.

The enemy Red forces will be outlined by members of the Eighth Regular Army Division.

Salisbury Pass Pushed in Plea For New Road

State Asked to Build Route From Pocomoke to Point North of City.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Aug. 27.—Delegations from Wicomico and Worcester counties went before the State roads commission in Baltimore today to request construction of a highway on a direct route from Pocomoke to a point just north of Salisbury. It would be a relocation of U. S. route No. 13 between these two cities.

Included in the delegations were the boards of county commissioners of the two counties, Senator Milton L. Veasey, of Pocomoke, and Senator O. Straughn Lloyd, of Salisbury.

Senator Lloyd carried with him a motion passed yesterday at a meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the Retail Merchants Association, which indorsed the highway and a traffic by-pass through Salisbury, but insisting that the latter project be given preference by the roads commission.

The Salisbury by-pass, designed to relieve several city streets of the through north-southbound traffic, was approved by a former State roads commission two years ago, a survey made and approximate cost of rights-of-way procured, but no further action has been taken.

Indorsing the by-pass, the Salisbury mayor and council pointed out that this city is the only municipality in Maryland through which the State has not constructed and maintained a through highway.

Piedmont Puts Off 5th Dairy Festival

Committee Selects Oct. 10, 11 Due to Epidemic.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., Aug. 27.—The fifth annual Piedmont dairy festival will be held October 10 and 11, instead of September 26 and 27, it was decided last night at the dairy festival meeting held at the Prince William Hotel. The postponement was made necessary by the delay in the opening of the public schools in Prince William County due to infantile paralysis. The pageant and parade of the festival is made up almost entirely of school children.

The festival will include the regular schedule of features such as the opening ball, pageant and coronation of the queen, Regina V; the milky way parade, areial maneuvers and the queen's ball.

Mr. Richard Hynson, president of the Dairy Festival Association, has called another meeting for Wednesday night.

The county board of health decided recently the county public schools would remain closed until September 27.

Divorce Seeker Tells of Vigil Over Man at Rooming House

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 27.—The story of an Easter morning "watch" for her husband, which ended when she found a ladder leading to a rear balcony of a rooming house here, was told at a divorce court hearing today by Mrs. Carrie J. Weller.

She is seeking a divorce from her husband, E. S. Weller, who was not present for the hearing. Judge Arthur D. Willard, of Frederick Circuit Court ordered a transcript of the testimony for further consideration.

Mrs. Weller testified she followed her husband the night before last Easter to a rooming house here and saw him enter the house a few minutes after a woman had gone in. She testified she obtained permission to go into the house, but received no answer when she knocked at a room door.

The watch continued until 1:30 a. m. when she looked from a window and saw a ladder leaning against the outside wall.

Theodore Alexander, a resident at the house, testified Weller had been coming there since 1930. Raymond C. Geisbert, who lives next door, testified he placed the ladder against the balcony and helped Weller get down.

Lay Minister Held in Theft Blames Bets

R. K. Edwards, Sought 4 Weeks Says Horses Were Downfal.

Embezzlement, Forgery Are Charged; Books Are Audited.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 27.—Rufus K. Edwards, 36, Methodist lay-minister and racetrack habitue who disappeared July 30 leaving a note to his employer, Edwin C. Hook, of the E. C. Hook Corporation, indicating that all was not well in the affairs of one of several companies with which he had been associated for years, was in custody tonight on a charge of embezzling $490 from the E. C. Hook Corporation.

Hook said tonight he had sworn out an additional warrant before Magistrate C. Edward Heard charging Edwards with forgery. The warrant charges that Hook's name as treasurer of St. James School had been forged to checks by Edwards. One check of $165 was specified.

Edwards, whose whereabouts had been unknown since his disappearance and the filing of a warrant charging him with the larceny of $50 from the McComas Armstrong Co., was arrested this evening at the home of a relative at Funkstown by Sheriff Max Malott and deputies. The sheriff, who learned that Edwards had returned earlier in the day and was seeking to arrange bond, went to the Funkstown home and served the warrant.

Race Horses Blamed.

While being finger-printed by Police Officer Clarence Baker tonight, Edwards was quoted as having said:

"You know what got me into this—race horses."

Baker said that Edwards further stated that it had been going on for about six years and that "if I were given another chance, I will promise to lead a good, clean, Christian life."

"I was returning voluntarily to give myself up," he told a reporter. Refusing to discuss the charges against him, "until my attorney arrives," Edwards however, did say, "I haven't been in my right mind for three months, and didn't know what I was doing."

Auditors Check Books.

Auditors are still engaged in poring over the books of St. James School, an Episcopal preparatory school, near Hagerstown, which Edwards had access to, as well as those of several other business organizations with which he was connected, including the E. C. Hook Corporation, and a building and loan company.

Nervous when ushered into the office of Magistrate John Dunn here shortly after his arrest, he smoked a cigar as he awaited the arrival of counsel and a bondsman. He had lost weight in the four weeks and appeared haggard.

Edwards, before he came here resided at Rippon, Jefferson County, W. Va., where his mother still lives. He started as a clerk and had worked himself up to a position of confidence. He was much in demand at churchs in the absence of the regular pastors and during prohibition often invaded moonshining districts to condemn illicit liquor manufactur from the pulpit. He had substituted for a minister in Morgan County, W. Va., only a few weeks before his disappearance.

Hid In Hills.

Police Capt. Clarence Emmert has in his possession the note Edwards left behind for his employer, in which he made certain admissions and said that he was going somewhere to start life anew and asked forgiveness of his employer.

Edwards evidently had been snugly hidden in the hills where he at one time preached the doctrines of virtue. Since then police had been searhing for him throughout three States on a warrant sworn out by Hook.

Short-wave radio sets of police in Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia broadcast the description of the heavy-set, bespectacled man of 36 years, known as a daily visitor at the spring meeting of the Hagerstown race track.

He left behind two notes—one to his wife and one to Hook. To his wife he wrote he was sorry to put her in such a position and that he would send for her so they could "start all over" in another town. Since then she has repeatedly defended him, discrediting talk of "another woman."

Edwards' sermons had been heard in Hagerstown churches, Williamsport, Berkeley Springs, and remote chapels of nearby mountain country. His sobriety was established among his friends and apparently his only vice was placing bets on the horses.

Women Told Vote's Value In Recovery

Attorney Gen. O'Conor Speaks to Democrats of Somerset Club.

Their Efforts Commended for Results Since Getting Franchise.

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 27.—Addressing the Women's Democratic Club of Somerset County, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor today urged women to exercise their franchise to insure betterment of social conditions.

The meeting also was attended by delegates of Democratic women from Worcester, Wicomico and Dorchester counties.

"The advent of women into politics was a fortunate thing for our Government," Attorney General O'Conor said. "Questions have arisen affecting the welfare and even the very lives of people for whom the Government exists.

"To these pressing problems women have contributed of their judgments and counsel and I am happy to take the opportunity of commending them for the outstanding part played in the progressive steps of recent years.

"The Democratic women of Maryland, united in a common cause for worthy objectives, can prove the effectiveness or organization and demonstrate the benefits to be derived from a party which is dedicated to the cause of the great mass of people by adhering to the principles upon which our party was founded.

"Party organization can justify itself only if its power is utilized for the best interests of the people of the country. The Democratic Party is committed to the principle that the needs, the comforts and conditions of the great masses of people are the most important confronting any governmental agency."

Mrs. Mayme A. Collins, Crisfield, is president of the Somerset Women's Democratic Club. Other officers are Mrs. Oliver S. Horsey, vice president; Mrs. Moody Horner, recording secretary; Miss Juliet Morris, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Harold McCallen, treasurer. Mrs. Collins is a member of the House of Delegates.

Other speakers included Carl Monsees, Washington; State Senator Mary E. W. Risteau, and Mrs. Blanche Phillips, Miss Ruth Shoemaker, women members of the House of Delegates.

City's Mystery Light Traced to Scientist

Baltimore, Aug. 27 (AP).—Northwest Baltimore's mysterious light mystery was solved today.

Last night, residents of that section were baffled by the lights which glowed off and on, on clouds over the city. Various explanations were offered.

But, today, Harry Pullen, director of an experiment with a fog-penetrating light, solved the mystery. It was his fog light all the time.

V. P. I. Courses And Instructors To Be Increased

Classes Start September 20, 1,400 Students Expected to Enroll.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 27.—Important additions to both curriculum and faculty will mark the opening of Virginia Polytechnic Institute September 19.

New courses in chemical engineering have been planned under Dr. Frank C. Vilbrandt, former chemical engineer at the Iowa State Engineering Experiment Station. Charles J. Hyslup, formerly of the Virginia State board of education, will direct an expanded curriculum in vocational guidance, and Charles O. Handley, superintendent of game propagation in Virginia, will join the staff September 1 as director of a series of short courses to be given in wild-life conservation, ecology, and propagation.

Other additions to the staff include Dr. William Lee Sandidge, jr., professor of English; Dr. J. George Harrar, assistant professor of biology; Pasquale M. Torraca, acting instructor in architectural engineering; H. E. Campbell, instructor in mathematics; Dr. Grant William Anderson, instructor in biology; R. P. Walker, instructor in agronomy; E. T. Swink, instructor in agricultural engineering; E. C. Meredith, acting assistant professor of sanitary engineering.

A slightly larger enrollment is expected, with the total number of students estimated between 1,400 and 1,500.

Three of the four buildings erected as part of the $1,066,000 PWA grant obtained in January, 1934, have been completed. The utilities building, housing the electric service department, the laundry, and the tailor shop, were occupied last Christmas. The new stone dormitory, the faculty apartment house and social center will be occupied by September 1, and the fourth building, which includes an auditorium seating 3,100, is expected to be completed about Christmas.

Classes will begin September 20, but new students will report September 17 for two days of specialized lectures to aequaint them with the school.

Works Projects Listed For Berkeley County

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 27.—The Berkeley County planning board today decided upon a number of work projects for Martinsburg and this county to be drawn up by engineers and submitted through State headquarters to the Works Progress Administration at Washington.

The chief projects were for High street, sanitary and storm sewers, paving and the continuance of work at Shepherd Flying Field, provided the city takes over the field in fee simple.

Judge Bans Fishing Net As Unlawful

Defendant at Annapolis Draws $25 Fine; Keeps Equipment.

Jurist Suggests Effort Be Made to Change Maryland Law.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 27.—Judge Linwood L. Clark, sitting as a court of special jurisdiction, today ruled that use of gill nets to encircle schools of fish was illegal.

The State law does not specifically outlaw the type of net involved in the case, but Judge Clark, in an oral decision, held it came within the meaning of the phrase "or any similar destructive device" mentioned in the law.

Appeal Filed.

Capt. W. C. Jackson, Tilghman's Island, the defendant, was fined $25, but his net was not confiscated. His counsel filed an appeal to the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court.

Judge Clark, in his decision, said the case was of "vital importance to the whole Chesapeake Bay territory." He pointed out that it was the intent of the law to conserve fish in the interest both of the public and of the fishermen.

Suggests Plan.

A gill net is a net from 900 to 1,000 feet long and 20 feet deep. It is dropped from the stern of a power boat, the lead line sinking to the bottom and the cork line floating in or near the surface. The net is then drawn around the school of fish.

Judge Clark pointed out to the defendant that the Legislature will be in special session early next year, at which time he can work for changes in the law to expressly provide for use of the nets.

Locust Trees Wither As Disease Spreads

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 27.—Thousands of locust trees on the lower slopes of the Blue Ridge Mountains are withering rapidly from a disease which appears to be similar to that which wiped out chestnut trees many years ago.

Hardly a locust is to be found on the mountains which is not yellowing, giving the impression of early fall against the rich green of the firs, elms and oaks.

Berkeley Club Holds Industrial Loop Lead

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 27.—Although splitting even in its weekend bill of games, the Berkeley club, of the Bi-County Industrial League, holds to the league lead as the end of the campaign approaches.

Berkeley defeated Millville, 9-5, but dropped a 19-13 decision to Blairton in a wild game. Blairton, in the meantime, failed to take advantage of the split games because of a 5-2 less to Bakerton at Blairton.

Tiempo Justifies 4-to-5 Odds in Feature at Marlboro

Worsham's 153 Leads Caddy Tourney

Winner, With 3 Others, Will Play in Chicago Next Month.

REFUSING to surrender the lead which he grabbed the first day, Lewis Worsham, 17-year-old Kenwood Golf and Country Club player, won top honors yesterday at Kenwood with a 36-hole total of 153 in the tournament to determine the four caddies who will compete against teams from New York and Chicago at Chicago on September 7.

Worsham, consistent from the opening hole on Monday, added a 77 to his first round 76, to lead Ernie Garlem, Columbia caddy, by six strokes.

Others who qualified for the trip to the Windy City were Gilbert Willett, 15-year-old host club caddy, who had 81-82—163, and Charles (Nick) DeLough, of Congressional, who won a place after a one-hole playoff with Chester Towney, Anacostia entry.

DeLough and Towney had tied with rounds of 83, 82—165. DeLough spanked out two nice shots to reach the green safely for his par 4, while Towney made four bad shots and finished with a 7.

Mawson Is Best.

Garlem scored a 78 and 81 for a 159.

The finest 18-hole round of the tournament was scored by Bob Mawson, of Chevy Chase, who, after taking 91 blows the first day, came back yesterday to shoot a 75, one shot better than the 76 posted by Worsham.

Worsham thus will captain the District caddies in the tournament. The four youngsters are being sent to Chicago by the Herald, sponsor of the tournament, first of its kind ever held here.

Jacobs Helps Pick Quarters for Louis

Jacobs was expected in Washington yesterday, but was unable to come to the Capital. To settle the important question of where Louis would train for his bout against the former heavyweight champion, Roxborough was summoned to Gotham.

Tiempo, Local Racer, Wins Marlboro Event

By Walter Haight.

WITH a majority of the 5,000 customers who greeted the return of racing to historic Marlboro yesterday from Washington, it was only nautral that Washington should play a big part in the program. Thus it was for a Capital-owned horse to run away with the feature race, with a District boy in the saddle. The combination was that of Tiempo, the property of C. C. Smithson, and Eddie Smith, the boy who led the riders at Cumberland.

It was a sad day for Smith, despite the fact that he triumphed in the big race, for he was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding in the previous race. The stewards did not approve of the way Smith allowed his mount to bump horses at the first turn as he was winning with Jane Ellen in the fourth.

However, there was no bumping in the feature. Tiempo, a winner at Hialeah, jumped into the lead at the start and was never headed. Dunwin made a game, but futile, attempt to catch the leader and was second, ahead of Golden Play, with something to spare.

Tiempo was not a secret. Word on the lod daughter of Lucky Hour moved like a wave through the crowd and her odds shrunk accordingly. When the running had been completed a $3.60 mutuel was displayed on the board.

Double Worth $12.80.

The first daily double conducted at Marlboro resulted in a short pay-off. The horses that figured were two favorites, Amijo and Gagne, and the mutuel was $12.80.

The Bond Stable, of Baltimore, which led in winners at Cumberland, began the meeting auspiciously by taking the opening race with Amijo, capably ridden by Jockey V. Wisner.. Pepper Patch was second and Staff Officer third. As usual, Amijo came from behind and was going away in the stretch. The winner was a favorite at $4.90.

The favorite players made it two straight successes in the second race. Bob Martin, up for the first time since his suspension at Cumberland, rode an excellent race to win with Tuleyries Wand at a $4.20 mutuel. Play Cap and Pipedream were the other money horses. Lady Buck cut out a fast pace bue folded when the real running began.

Sammy Palumbo gave one of his good riding exhibitions to take the third with Gagne, another public choice. Edyth M. was second and Big Toney third in the eight horse field. Palumbo rated Gagne off the pace and then closed with a

Dodgers Snap Streak In Splitting Twin Bill

Brooklyn, Aug. 27 (AP).—With Watson Clark hurling eight-hit ball, the Brooklyn Dodgers snapped a seven-game losing streak today as they whipped the Cincinnati Reds, 10 to 1, in the second game of a double-header after dropping the first, 7 to 3.

Home runs by Ival Goodman and Lew Riggs led the heavy Cincinnati attack in the first off Van Mungo, ace of the Brooklyn hurling staff, who was making his first start in nearly two months.

Sir Malcolm Is In U. S. for Speed Test

Auto Recordholder More Worried About War Than 'Bluebird.'

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Anxious to attack his old record and hen get back where the war clouds are gathering, Sir Malcolm Campbell, the 50-year-old Briton who drives with the winds, landed today, bound for the salt beds of Utah.

"I'm afraid there's going to be a fearful show over there," he said, far more worried about Endgland's stand against Italy in the Ethiopian atngle than over the dangers he faces striving to pilot his mighty Bluebird racing car 300 miles an hour. He set the present mark at 276.816 on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., in February.

Strangely enough a living reminder of the last war was with him in the person of his 15-year-old son Donald, named after his best friend, Donald Hay, who flew with him in France.

"We were in a fight together," the slim, undramatic Englishman explained, "when Hay was shot down and filled. I always said if I had a son I'd name him Donald, and I did."

War and Speed.

His hair perhaps a trifle thinner, but his eyes clear as ever, face gaunt, nerves steady, Campbell talked freely of his hopes and ambitions in Utah, but more freely still of the dangers of war abroad.

"Oh, if America would only back up Great Britain," he said. "Just tell the world that they won't allow another war to start, there would be none. We belong together. No one would dare defy the might of Great Britain and the United States combined."

The "show" in Utah will be as brief as he can make it, so that if trouble does break out abroad he will be back there and ready to take a hand.

"I'm shooting for 300," he said, "but more important than that we're making scientific tests this time never tried before."

Camera on Dash.

An electrically driven camera will record the readings of all the instruments on his dashboard when Campbell starts his runs on the 12-mile rock calt stretch about dawn on September 1. The readings will show him how much power is swallowed up by the 2,500 horsepowered thunderbolt in overcoming wind resistance, and rolling resistance.

His car is unchanged from the Daytona runs and he has 40 tires. He figures that at the salt bed altitude of 4,100 feet, his car will lose 18 per cent of its power, but gain 14 per cent from lessened wind resistance, a net debit of 4 per cent. He may live in a tent on the desert, or stay in Wendover, a town of 600, a few miles from the race course. He has only raced once since leaving Daytona, and then he made 150 miles an hour in a 7-horsepowered car at Brooklands. He will leave tomorrow either for Chicago or Detroit, and will fly from Chicago to Salt Lake City Friday. Capt. George Eyston, who will drive a 600-horsepower racer called Speed of the Wind, in an attempt to break long-distance records, accompanies him.

Clarence Campbell New Culpeper Coach

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 27.—Clarence Campbell, of Sparta, Caroline County, has been appointed athletic coach and member of the Culpeper High School faculty by the county school board to succeed Waverly W. Jefferson, jr., resigned.

Campbell is a graduate of Hampden Sydney College, where he won his letters in football and baseball, and captained the baseball team last year. For the last two summers he has been a star player for the Culpeper Athletic Club.

Browns Beat Nats in 2 Battles of the game. After Lary had doubled and Solters had walked, Solters pounded a home run over the right field pavilion to boost the Browns' lead to 10-4 and place the game beyond reclaim by the Nats.

The hits were even in the second game, nine for each team, but Newsom's wildness converted the contest into a romp for the Browns. He walked the first three men to face him and one hit, Clift's single to center, netted the Browns a 3-0 lead.

Nats Avert Shut-Out.

Newsom ran into more trouble in the second inning when with two on base, Solters doubled to right to boost the Browns' lead to 5-0. It was 6-0 at the end of the fourth when Burns scored on a wild pitch after drawing a walk.

The Nats averted a shut-out defeat in the fifth. Rookie Jimmy Starr singled to left and Newsom singled to right. Starr scored on Miles' single that followed.

Newsom's tenth and eleventh passes of the game figured in a five-run St. Louis uprising in the seventh inning that brought the score to its final figures of 11-1. West singled, Carey doubled, Heath walked, Van Atta singled, Lary walked to fill the bases, and Burns drove in the final three runs with a double to right.

Final Tryouts For Olympics Go to N. Y.

Randall's Island Stadium to Be Scene of Tests Next July 10-11.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—The new $2,500,000 Randall's Island, N. Y., stadium was selected today as the scene for the final tryouts for places on the 1936 American Olympic track and field squad by the committee in charge of the sport, subject to approval by the general committee.

The committee, headed by Willia J. Bingham, of Harvard University, who also was named manager of the squad, set July 10-11, 1936, as the dates for the tryouts.

Bingham said the New York invitation was accepted on the condition that the new plant, which will seat 60,000 spectators and provide standing room for 40,000 more, be "completely and suitably equipped to satisfactorily conduct the tryouts." Assurance has been given, he said, that the stadium will meet the requirements.

Other Bids Extended.

Bids for the event also were extended by Dallas, Tex., Philadelphia, Chicago, and Princeton University. New York was selected as the logical site because the squad will sail for Berlin from there on July 15. Acceptance of any of the other invitations would have involved huge additional expense in transporting athletes to the trials and from there to New York.

As was expected, Lawson Robertson, the University of Pennsylvania's veteran coach, was named for the fourth time to direct preparation of the squad for the games at Berlin. Robertson was head coach of the 1924, 1928 and 1932 Yankee squads. T. Nelson Metcalf, athletic director at the University of Chicago, and Dean Cromwell, of the University of Southern California, will assist Robertson. A Southern coach may be added to the staff later.

Lone Ticket Holder Gets $1,422 Double

Niagara Falls, Ontario, Aug. 27 (AP).—With William Frechauf of Williamsville, N. Y., holding the only ticket, the largest daily double in Canada this year was returned at Stamford this year on the combination of Diamond Digger and Timon which paid $1,422.05 for $2. Diamond Digger won the first race and paid $77.70 straight in the mutuels while a $2 win ticket on Timon, victor in the third, was worth $36.10.

Yankees Divide Two Games With Sox

Sox Lose First, 13-10, Rally to Win Second, 4-3; Simmons Hits Homer.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (AP).—The Yankees and White Sox divided a double-header this afternoon, with the Yanks winning the first game, a slugfest, 13-10, while the Pale Hose took the second, 4-3.

New York let loose with a barrage of 18 hits to gain the decision in the curtain-raiser. Al Simmons, however, was the batting hero, driving in three runs with his fifteenth homer of the season.

Horses Sired by Pharamond II Win Four Narragansett Events

Feature Race Is Taken by Allen Z.

Gratton Gelding Leads All Way; Chancery Runs Second.

By the Associated Press.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 27.—Horses sired by Hal Price Headley's Pharamond II won four of the events on today's 'Gansett card.

Two of these winners, the Branncastle Farm's Our Crest and L. A. Brusie's Gay Crest, are full sisters, both being by Cresta II. Our Crest won the second, 5½ furlongs for 2-year-olds, and Gay Crest took the fourth, a mile and one-sixteenth for 3-year-olds.

Another of the four was Headley's Sandy Beach which took the first, 5½ furlongs for 2-year-olds, and the fourth was J. U. Gratton's Allen Z., winner of the fifth, a mile and 70 yards for 3-year-olds. The latter event was the feature, conducted under cloudy skies but over a fast track unchanged by a heavy shower which fell just before post time for the first race.

Near Track Record.

Allen Z ran the distance in 1:42 3-5, only one-fifth of a second slower than the track record for the distance. The Gratton gelding was out front all the way, with first one and then another horse attempting to challenge. This continual pushing brought out the best efforts of Allen Z and resulted in the fast time for the race.

Marty Madden's Chancery started to move near the half-mile pole and proved the one to test Allen Z at the end. These two fought it out down the center of the track, while the Calumet Farm's Skip It came through on the rail to make a race of it. Skip It was two and a half lengths back of Chancery at the end.

44 Youths Report At Allegany High

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANDY BEACH, $6.80, $4.20, $3.60; GLITTER GLOW, $6.40, $4.90; WILLOW WOOD, $5.90.

SANDY BEACH went to the front at once, drew away into a good lead, and won with speed in reserve. GLITTER GLOW, well placed all the way, continued gamely in the stretch run. WILLOW WOOD, in nearest pursuit of the early pace, made a determined effort to reach the leader, was not good enough, and weakened inside the last 70 yards. WISE KING improved his position.

SECOND RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:10½. Winner, Branneastle Farm's gr. f. (2), by Pharamond II—Cresta II. Trained by H. Roberts. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:06 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR CREST, $7.80, $4.80, $4.10; BULLFINCH, $13.40, $6.80; BE JUST, $8.40.

OUR CREST, slow to begin, went into contention with a rush on the outside, disposed of BE JUST, opened up a good lead and held away to the end. BULLFINCH, steadied along in back of the pace, came willingly in the stretch drive. BE JUST showed good speed, but was unable to keep pace in the closing drive.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:40. Off at 3:42½. Winner, Mrs. J. Badame's ch. c. (4), by Prince of Umbria—Helen Drake. Trained by J. Badame. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRINCE DRAKE, $14.50, $7.40, $4.20; DROMBO, $4.50, $3.40; JUDGE SCHILLING, $6.00.

PRINCE DRAKE, under slight restraint for the opening half-mile, came to the outside of the leaders entering the stretch, came gamely, and outlasted DROMBO at the end. The latter, restrained early, moved up around on the outside when making his effort. He had a slight lead at the finish, but was unable to stave off the winner's bid. JUDGE SCHILLING, prominent all the way, continued gamely to the end.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:11. Off at 4:13. Winner, L. A. Brusie's br. f. (3), by Pharamond II—Cleista II. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 4-5, 1:47 2-5.

OUR ROSE	106	2	2	2½	2½	2½	6	8	Seabo	37.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GAY CREST, $7.00, $3.90, $3.00; GOLDPIN, $5.40, $3.70; BALANCER, $4.10.

GAY CREST was steadied along within striking distance of the pace, took command in the stretch and, hard ridden, held command to the close. GOLDPIN, as usual slow to begin, worked her way up gradually and closed stoutly in the last three-sixteenths. BALANCER closed good gap and was going willingly at the end.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,300. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:43. Winner, J. U. Gratton's b. g. (3), by Pharamond II—La Marlere. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $975; second, $195; third, $90; fourth, $40. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48, 1:12 3-5, 1:38, 1:42 3-5.

Horses	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

CLOUD SWEEPER	108	4	3	3½	3½	7½	7	7	Howell	17.85

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALLEN Z., $9.60, $5.20, $3.40; CHANCERY, $5.10, $3.60; SKIP IT, $5.10.

ALLEN Z. took command at once, withstood determined early opposition from GLYNDON BELLE, disposed of her and, hard ridden at the end, held CHANCERY safely at the latter. CHANCERY, under stout restraint while following the pace, moved up on the outside and, closing gamely, barely failed to be along in time. SKIP IT dropped back in the run to the first turn, moved up steadily down the back stretch in close quarters rounding the far turn, but weakened in the last furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:10. Off at 5:10½. Winner, C. C. Hastings' br. g. (5), by Flying Penny—Penny Pun. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $900; second, $180; third, $85; fourth, $35. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13, 1:38 3-5, 1:52 2-5.

Horses	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

INCANDESCENT	101	3	1	2½	2½	2½	4½	5	Stevenson	3.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CENTER LANE, $9.10, $4.60, $2.90; MIDSHIPMAN, $4.30, $3.00; PROPAGANDIST, $2.80.

CENTER LANE, under steadying restraint while forcing the pace for the first six furlongs, moved up approaching the stretch, came to the outside and, closing stronely, was going away at the end. MIDSHIPMAN, well placed all the way, moved through on the inside at the stretch turn to take the lead from PROPAGANDIST and went wide, but was no match for the winner when challenged. PROPAGANDIST took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along under stout restraint while racing extremely wide, lost ground in the stretch turn and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:42½. Winner, F. Hayes' ch. f. (3), by Bud Larner—Decree. Trained by P. E. Fitzgerald. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:12 3-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:47 3-5.

FRIAR MARK	108	1	2	8	8	8	8	8	Chanove	5.45

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVE LOST, $13.90, $7.50, $4.80; PLATINUM BLONDE, $5.40, $3.90; ON SIR, $4.80.

LOVE LOST followed in nearest pursuit of the pace, continued in same fashion through the last furlong, and outlasted PLATINUM BLONDE at the end. The latter, restrained early, moved through on the inside at the stretch turn, assumed a slight lead inside the last sixteenth, but was unable to stave off the winner. ON SIR went to the front in the run to the first turn, drew clear, was rated along under slight restraint, but was unable to keep pace in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:11. Off at 6:13. Winner, J. F. Morgan's br. g. (5), by Black Servant—Billy Howe. Trained by J. F. Vaughan. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13, 1:39 3-5, 1:46 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARRY, $5.60, $3.50, $2.80; MATHIAS, $5.80, $3.80; BRIGHT BIRD, $5.80.

BARRY, restrained in closest pursuit of the pace for most of the way, wore down BRIGHT BIRD for command before reaching the stretch and, hard ridden, held MATHIAS safe. The latter was well placed all the way, came to the outside in the stretch and closed in same fashion. BRIGHT BIRD went to the front in the run to the first turn, was rated along under slight restraint and, though making a game effort to go along with the winner, was not good enough.

On the Air Today

What is a "Big Show" like when it's in rehearsal?

How long do the musicians and stars toil over their scripts and music? The answer is hours and hours, as a rule, but occasionally a network feature is so well planned and the participants so accustomed to the swing of the show that three hours' of rehearsal is sufficient.

Take the NTG program on Tuesday nights, last night's to be specific. It's 12:30 p. m. Tuesday and the stage is set in N. B. C.'s small auditorium. Harry Salter is midstage with his saxophonists, fiddles and cornets scattered before him in position. Salter is on a platform which looks much like three risers and a platform of a stairway. Down front, near where footlights would be if the stage were in a theater, is a microphone for Nils T. Granlund "and his girls." Off to the right is a floor mike, two feet above the rolled hardwood carpet on which the abbreviated chorus will dance as a touch of atmosphere as the show begins and ends.

The first three or four rows of seats are dotted with performers. "Granny" enters, singles out a shy little girl. "Where's that funny looking outfit you had on when you first came to see me?" he demands. "It's just outside," the girl replies. "Well, by all means get it," Granlund urges. "I want you to wear it when you make your first appearance. Then, later in the show you reappear in a brand new evening gown." She promises to go get it at once.

"You see," NTG explains, "she came in from Columbus, Ohio, a day or two ago in the funniest pink and blue outfit you ever laid eyes on. But she's got the stuff. Her dad's a boilermaker in the railroad shops and he got the little girl and her mother passes so they could come to the big city for a "chance."

Salter is putting the orchestra through an arrangement for a tall blonde singer who has just won a contest in Florida. One start? Two? Three—a dozen times the maestro stops to change the orchestration for the violins or the trumpets. At last they go through without a break. That number is right now.

NTG is in earnest conversation with three girls, a trio, it develops, from Dallas. "All you got to do is stick with that south Texas lingo," he explains. "And put plenty of life into what you say. Remember, you came to New York to make a success in the show business. You're going places. So sound like it."

Another act is rehearsed with Salter—a girl who got her first training in dramatics and then found she had a singing voice of quality. Ah, here is Gracie Barrie, tonight's star guest. She talks with Salter. Ta, da, da, de. Da—that's the way. Salter gesticulates, hums the melody as Gracie wants it played. They nod their understandings. That takes care of her preparations. Gracie knows and Salter knows what is wanted in two or three minutes.

"Let's go," the production man yells. And the dress rehearsal is on. Wallington has been delayed, so the script writer reads his lines. The chorus springs to life, the stage is set for NTG's entrance.

"——And let's give the girl from Florida a big reception." Granlund addresses a mythical audience, stepping to the edge of the stage. The performers and scattered visitors applaud as though the show were on.

Back in the control room engineers test voices and check positions of artists at the mike. The production man times each unit. And finally the rehearsal ends. A general consultation is held between engineers, production men and Salter. Timing is adjusted. The chorus drifts out. "And don't forget to put plenty of life into your voice tonight," NTG yells to the departing girl from the provinces.

"NTG and his girls" is an informal show. And rehearsal is as simple as that.

rush that displaced the front-running Edyth M. The winner paid $5.60.

Eddie Smith scored in the fourth race with Jane Ellen, a paddock tip, paying $6. The 6-year-old mare went to the front and stayed there. Canteret closed with a rush and would have been the winner in a few more strides. Small Change, a Bond horse and the favorite, was forced to lose ground at the turns but finished a game third.

Dark Ayr upset the talent in the sixth under hard urging from Jockey C. Coffman. Buntino closed with a rush to be second ahead of Daisy Bunga. The winner paid $11.70 and Daisy Bunga was $25.80 to show. Calome and Arab, a pair of tips, were nowhere in particular. Apathy, a $6.90 betting proposition, won the day's final. Sherry did a good job in the saddle.

Eckhart A. A. Triumphs To Retain League Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., Aug. 27.—The Eckhart A. A., Keyser Golden Knights and Frostburg Giants remained in the fight for the second-half championship of the Cumberland and Georges Creek League by defeating Barton, Lonaconing and Westveco, while the Midland Indians and Cumberland Colts were having an off day.

Eckart retained its one-game lead over Keyser by nosing out the Barton Braves on the latter's field by the score of 3 to 2. Keyser won from Lonaconing.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AMIJO, $4.90, $3.50, $2.50; STAFF OFFICER, $5.10, $2.80; PEPPER PATCH, $2.70.

AMIJO broke well, but was blocked going to first turn, where he was taken to outside of field and closed well under punishment to win going away. STAFF OFFICER broke fast and bore over on field at first turn, opened comfortable lead, but tired in stretch. PEPPER PATCH, blocked going to first turn, didn't get clear sailing until in the stretch. FAIRIO closed immense gap from slow beginning.

SECOND RACE—About six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:44. Off at 2:45. Winner, C. M. Feltner's b. m. (5), by Westwick—Black Wand. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:25, 0:50 2-5, 1:20 2-5, 1:28.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—APATHY, $6.90, $4.60, $2.60; BUNKY, $10.60, $3.50; GOOD SENSE, $3.00.

APATHY, well up throughout, saved ground at far turn to come on to driving victory. BUNKY, in thick of contention throughout, had no excuses. GOOD SENSE broke well, was allowed to drop back first half, but closed with a rush last quarter. HOLLAND, far back for three-quarters, was picking up tiring horses at end. HOT CAKE showed fine speed for three-quarters, then chucked it up.

Eastern Shore Golf Will Open on Friday

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 27 (AP). Two former champions will seek the title in the fourth annual Eastern Shore amateur golf tournament opening here Friday.

Sidney Coltart of Salisbury, titleholder of the Eastern Shore Golf League, who won the crown last year, has moved out of the section and will not compete this year. John Roane of Salisbury and Royce R. Spring, who won a leg each on the trophy, have entered.

Utilities Line Up for Battle On Holding Act

Dividends Threatened While Status Is Being Adjudicated.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 27.—Prospects for continuation of the fight against the utility holding company bill, this time in the courts, unfolded today in Wall Street as power company experts studied the regulatory law signed late yesterday by the President.

Legal aids gave close attention to wording of the act to advise utility chiefs how far-reaching they believed the law will be and whether, in their opinion, drastic realignment of utility organizations will be necessary immediately.

One stumbling block which bobbed up right after President Roosevelt affixed his signature to the act was the attitude power company directors should adopt on dividends pending an interpretation.

So far as holding companies are concerned, those high in utility groups were in the dark on whether they might be expected to conserve cash under the theory that such assets belonged to creditors and not to stockholders.

On the other hand, it was believed that if outstanding obligations of holding companies are to be redeemed within a few years, the companies will need extra cash to meet the additional expense of the redemption.

Possible Cash Call.

Some companies have securities outstanding which under ordinary circumstances would not be called for something like 90 years, and it was said by some that a substantial cash premium might have to be paid if the obligations are called within a short time.

Most financial circles agreed that a court test of the holding company bill is inevitable, but there was no understanding as to the time of such test or how the battle would be opened.

It appeared likely that such action would be brought on by deliberate and open evasion of the law —such as declining to register to submit to regulation—so that the Government through the Securities & Exchange Commission might take the disciplinary action provided for in the law.

Then, with the utility able to show damage because of the law, a suit against the Government was expected to be carried through to the Supreme Court.

Oil Stocks Drop, Production Gains

By the Associated Press.

Stocks of foreign and domestic crude petroleum on August 17 were reported by the Bureau of Mines yesterday at 311,515,000 barrels, a decline of 1,878,000 from the preceding week.

Commenting on a 50,000-barrel increase in daily average crude production to 2,770,000 barrels, Secretary Ickes said sarcastically: "You have the State compact, you know."

Asked if the compact was not merely to prevent overproduction resulting in physical waste, he said: "I thought they were going to prevent overproduction."

Federal control of production was eliminated by the Supreme Court NRA decision and limited powers granted in extension of NRA.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

The position of the Treasury on August 24 was:

Receipts, $6,174,833.46; expenditures, $14,343,999.24; balance, $1,521,134,183.54; customs receipts for the month, $30,089,471.67.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $338,718,181.03; expenditures, $1,192,311,313.01, including $613,812,998.37 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $853,593,130.98; gross debt, $29,-483,516,716, a decrease of $3,833,956.60 under the previous day; gold assets, $8,-536,371,399.23.

Public Appetite Less For Treasury Bills

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announces that for the $50,000,000 of 273-day Treasury bills, dated August 28 and offered on August 23, bids were received for $84,157,000. This ratio of oversubscription was substantially less than for previous offerings of bills. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.942, equivalent to 0.076 per cent per annum, to 99.885, or 0.152 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

1935 Dividends Running Ahead Of Last Year's

Index Is 78 Against 75 in 1934; Highest Was 156 in 1930.

New York, Aug. 27.—Common dividends to be paid American stockholders this year will be above the figures for 1934, according to the common stock dividend index of the Standard Statistics Co.

This index, based on the 50 industrials, 20 rails and 20 utilities in the same company's 90-stock price index, together with the addition of ten other corporations to give representation to banking, insurance, automobile financing and other groups, is figured on the basis of a maintenance of the status quo, with no forecast of action later in the year which may bring increases and extras.

The index currently stands at 78 (1926 equals 100), against 75 for 1934 and 70 for 1933, the low point of the depression. The peak was recorded in 1930 when the index was 156.

The index for the current year has been revised upward since last April, when it was first computed, following favorable changes in the dividends of Hartford Fire Insurance, Commercial Investment Trust, du Pont, Timken Roller Bearing, Eastman Kodak, General Motors and International Nickel.

These favorable changes more than outweighed the downward revisions of the rates of Louisville & Nashville, American Waterworks & Electric and Public Service of New Jersey.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

	Tue.	Mon.
Advances	77	369
Declines	648	186
Unchanged	147	172
Total issues	872	727

Stocks—Predictions of market improvement after adjournment were amply disproved by a vigorous selling movement that carried prices of leaders down 1 to 3 or more points. Trading was so heavy as to leave the ticker minutes behind several times during the day. Transfers totaled 2,125,920 shares.

Bonds—Erratic fluctuations in Federals turned the entire list downward. Closes were scrambled with losses in the predominance. Transfers of $16,820,000 was second heaviest since June 20.

Curb—Prices yielded to a succession of selling waves in active trading which totaled approximately 421,000 shares.

Grains—Uneasiness over Canada's marketing policy reacted on wheat and prices fell off in a dull session. September wheat closed at 88, September corn at 73, and September oats at 25½.

Cotton—Demand resulting from the 10-cent loan lifted prices 13 to 19 points, closing at the top with October at 10.67.

Sugar—Raw sugar firmed to 3.48. Refined was 20 points higher at 5.30 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet. Santos No. 4 last at 8⅛ to 8¼, and Rio No. 7 final at 6½.

Bar silver—Unchanged at 65⅝ cents per ounce in New York. In London also unchanged at 29d (65.09 cents).

Bar gold—Off 1d to 139s 9½d ($34.83) in London.

Refined Sugar 5.30, Highest in 6 Years

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Several sugar refiners today hoisted the wholesale price of granulated sugar 1-5 of a cent to 5.30 cents a pound, the highest level since September, 1929. The new price will become effective tomorrow.

Standard Brands Cuts Dividend to 20 Cents

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Standard Brands, Inc., today declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents on the capital stock, payable October 1 to stock of record September 5. In previous quarters the company paid 25 cents a share.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks and Government Bonds Greet End of Congress Session With Sharp Decline; Wheat Also Falls.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 27.—If anyone supposed that the adjournment of Congress would catch the stock market unawares he had to pay for his mistake; if he speculated on it. At the start prices were moderately higher, but the market for some time has looked with keen interest to the ending of Congress, and apparently today was ready to cash in on the blessed event. Selling seeped through before noon, became more insistent at midday and by early afternoon was in full swing, with the ticker late, and leading stocks falling sharply. Closing prices were definitely lower, with a turnover of around 2,000,000 shares. Government bonds continued their decline. September wheat closed half a cent lower at 88⅛ cents a bushel.

Before the deluge of selling came several of the speculative favorites were shoved up a bit, some of them reaching new high prices. Du Pont was one. Otis Steel was another. Trading tapered off around midday, and, following a dull period, selling began which sent prices off from 1 to 5 points under their best of the day. Utilities lost 1 to 3 points, but they were not leaders of the decline. Just the same, the public utility group has given up from 20 to 40 per cent in value in a little more than a week.

Rail Issues Yield.

Railroad issues had to take a good deal of selling. Delaware & Hudson lost more than 2 points on a few sales. Others were fractionally lower. Mail order issues dropped 1 to 4 points, being especially hurt by a fall in wheat and the worry over cotton. Motor accessories fell 1 to 3 points and the motor shares had the usual sharp setback which follows a long upward thrust. General Motors lost a point and Chrysler dropped 2 points. Steels sagged 1 to 2 points. Du Pont rose 3 points at the start, but dropped 5 points from its best of the day. Waldorf System rose to a new high on the dividend resumption.

Government bonds continued to slide, on the eve of Liberty Loan refunding and tomorrow's offering of $100,000,000 Farm Mortgage 1½ per cent notes. A comparable issue, the HOLCs of 1939, was quoted at 99.2 this morning with no bid, so that some sections of the trade expected the bids on the new issue to be not in excess of 99. This morning's bill bids totaled only $84,000,000, on a $50,000,000 issue, against recent heavy bidding, and the price of 0.127 per cent stood out against the recent prevailing rate of 0.08. That was regarded as an indication of the wind's direction.

Government Securities.

Any more than is Secretary Morgenthau, the market is not alarmed over the weakness in the Government list, although minor recession has now developed into a real break. Current causes include the last frenzy of spending by Congress, pressure on the dollar abroad in connection with silver purchases, war possibilities, however remote, and the rising tide of speculation in stocks and commodities. Underneath that surface is the fact that the banks all over the country have since July been on what bond dealers term a buyers' strike, caused by the low yields.

Efforts to sell Government bonds to banks almost invariably meet with the same answer, say the dealers, running somewhat as follows: "We paid such high prices in the spring that we will wait now until we can secure bonds low enough to average up our losses and get yields worth taking." The market believes it highly unlikely that the Treasury can do better than a 3 per cent coupon on its Liberty Loan refunding, insofar as that portion is concerned which will be taken care of with long-term bonds.

Utilities.

Some brokers are advising their clients against snap judgment on the utility bill. They point out that even if the act should be held constitutional, it might not follow that investors would lose. Attention is called to rise in value of stocks of the trusts that were busted in the days of another new deal, which also was concerned with company busting for the fun of the thing. The analogy between Standard Oil, American Tobacco and others and the utility holding companies looks a bit strained, but just the same the old-fashioned advice to keep on the shirt appears to be sound.

Support.

The decline in Government securities reached a point today which brought some bargain buying of short term notes by banks which felt that yields would look large, compared with what might be quoted early next year if, as expected, excess reserves pile up again to new records before spring.

Chequered.

"If it be true that happy is the nation that has no history," it is written in the quarterly review of J. Henry Schroder Banking Corporation, "the present state of the world is far from beautitude, for history is making itself in these times at a pace and with a variety such as have never yet been seen. Summing up the progress of the last quarter, it is possible to venture the assertion that it leaves the business outlook about where it was when it started—chequered, and full of glowing promises and unpleasant possibilities."

Bogus.

Secretary Morgenthau joked about how he passed a bogus $20 bill, first for groceries and then for change in his department. The diehard critics of the Administration's monetary policy have comment ready for that one—to-wit, the Treasury has been passing out that sort of money for some time.

And After That?

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau makes no bones about a managed Treasury bond market. "We always let the market seek its own level," he says, "just before a new offering."

Construction.

The ill wind of the public utility holding company regulation act is expected to do some good to power and light construction industries. Already the cutting of interstate transmission services has begun, and it is expected that it will go a good deal further; for by keeping operations wholly intrastate a utility company will escape the Federal regulation and possibly dissolution. That will mean considerable changes in plant operation.

Cons. Oil Declares 25-Cent Dividend

New York, Aug. 27 (AP).—Directors of Consolidated Oil Corporation today declared a dividend of 25 cents on the common stock, payable October 10, to stock of record September 10.

Last year the company, as at present constituted, paid an initial dividend of 28 cents on April 7 and another dividend of 14 cents on October 13.

Fire, Casualty Surety Bill Is Introduced

New Local Insurance Act Placed on Calendar for Next Session.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Local regulation of fire, marine, and casualty insurance companies will be placed on the same plane as life insurance under the terms of a bill introduced at the final session of Congress by Mrs. Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee. No action on the bill will be taken until Congress convenes next January.

Known as No. 9227, the bill was drafted jointly by Insurance Commissioner John A. Marshall and Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal. Its object will be mainly to modernize the existing laws that were enacted 20 years ago. The act will delegate to Commissioner Marshall virtually the same powers that he now wields in the life insurance field here.

Among the new provisions that will work for more efficient regulation of the fire and casualty insurance business here are mandatory examinations on the District of Columbia insurance code for all agents, brokers, and solicitors. The insurance commissioner will be empowered also to file receivership proceedings against any company that in his opinion is not strong enough to discharge its obligations.

Great stress is laid on the financial structure of fire and casualty firms operating here in the act. No company will be allowed to do business of any sort unless it can show a minimum capital of $50,000 and paid up surplus of $25,000 more.

Local insurance circles believe that enactment of the pending legislation which carries with it simplified incorporation laws for insurance firms will result also in the establishment of a greater number of home offices here.

Total policy sales by 480 companies in the District during 1934 reached the record total of $4,409,000,000. Premium collections in the 12 months were $34,000,000. Less than one-tenth of this amount was retained by local firms.

The importance of adequate insurance regulations in Washington can not be overrated. According to a survey by the Association of Life Inurance Presidents of America, there is a greater amount of per capita insurance held here than in any other city or country in the world.

According to Commissioner Marshall, the revised insurance code for the life companies operating in the District, which went into effect a year ago, has resulted in far more efficient regulation and will ultimately result in a greater number of life companies establishing their headquarters here.

Chain-Store Trade Gathers Headway

New York, Aug. 27.—Chain-store trade in July took a firmer hold of the upward swing which started in June and climbed into new high ground, says the current review of Chain Store Age. The report continues:

"Although sales in some divisions slowed down somewhat, retail business as a whole, with the aid of a rising trend of activity in industry generally, extended the long gains already scored in the previous month.

"The state of trade in the field as measured by the Chain Store Age index, which makes allowance for the number of business days, advanced to a preliminary level of 96.5 of the 1929-31 average for the month taken as 100. The index in June was 96.3 and in May it was 92.

"The weight of the evidence available at this writing points to a continued, and in all likelihood, an accelerated rate of expansion of consumer buying in the immediately approaching months."

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 27.—Business on the stock exchange was small today in absence of buyers, owing to the uncertainty abroad. Prices sagged on light selling, especially silkedged securities and industrials. Transatlantic issues and copper shares improved. Favorable American advices, while gold mining stocks were affected by South African selling. The market closed dull.

Paris—Prices continued to sag on the bourse today with rentes holding the steadiest. Gold shares were heavy and bank issues moved irregularly. The market closed irregular.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse was dull with hardly any fluctuating taking place and prices closing unchanged.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 27 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.)—Fair quantities of 64s and finer territory wools in original bags continued to have a call in the Boston market. Prices were very firm. Most sales of short French combing were made at 65 cents scoured basis or slightly higher. Average to short staple sold mostly at 67@68 cents scoured basis, while average to good moved at around 70 cents.

First Woman Joins N. Y. Cocoa Exchange

New York, Aug. 27.—Miss Gretchen Schoenleber, president of the Ambrosia Chocolate Co., of Milwaukee, became the first woman to possess a seat on any of New York's commodity or securities exchanges, when she was elected yesterday to membership in the New York Cocoa Exchange. Although several member firms of the New York Stock Exchange boast of women partners, none of them has purchased seats on the exchange.

Stock Trading Up, Bond Sales Lower in July

Share Dealings 16.4% Higher, Bonds 3.7% Less in Month.

Securities valued at $1,421,826,055 were sold on the country's 21 registered exchanges in July, marking a sharp increase in trading over June the Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday.

Volume as well as value of security trading picked up last month and the daily sales averaged $54,685,618, compared with $51,065,282 in June, according to the SEC's summary of the month's transactions.

Increased activity in stocks accounted for all of the increase in trading in July; the value of bonds traded fell off. Stock sales, including a small amount of rights and warrants, amounted to $1,136,644,274, an increase of 15.3 per cent. Bond sales were valued at $283,146,177, a decrease of 2.1 per cent.

Total sales of stock in July, including rights and warrants, were 48,695,761 shares, or 16.4 per cent above June's figure. The total par value of bonds sold was $363,193,750, a decrease of 3.7 per cent.

The two leading New York exchanges accounted for 95.4 per cent of the value of total stock and bond sales on 21 registered exchanges; stock sales, 94.2 per cent, and bond sales, 99.8 per cent. Stock and bond trading on the Washington Stock Exchange totaled $199,673 in July, compared with $153,337 in June.

Sharp Cut Coming In Rubber Stocks

By the Associated Press.

Singapore, Aug. 27.—A reduction of 200,000 tons a year in stocks of rubber was forecast by V. A. Lowinger, one of the Malayan delegates in the international rubber regulation committee.

During a speech here he said the international committee established that, with the present quota of 65 per cent, and, provided there was no great change in world economic conditions, there would be a reduction beginning on July 1, 1935 of 200,000 tons a year in stocks.

It was hoped that as stocks receded prices would improve and give producers a reasonable profit without at the same time "bleeding" the consumer. He declined to give any indications as to what such a price should be.

Detroit Seeks Bids For $4,262,000 Bonds

Detroit, Aug. 27.—William J. Curran, city controller, announces that the city will entertain bids on September 9 for $4,262,000 of City of Detroit noncallable refunding bonds (water), series D, to be dated October 1, 1935, and to mature serially from October 1, 1936, to October 1, 1961, inclusive.

The award will be made on the basis of the lowest interest cost to the city after deducting premiums. Coupon rates are to be in multiples of ¼ per cent, but not to exceed 3¼ per cent. Bids must be for all or none. The bonds will be exempt from all taxation in the State of Michigan.

Ten-Cent Loan Gives Cotton Smart Rally

General Market Closes 13 to 19 Points Up; October 10.67.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 27.—Cotton rallied 13 to 19 points today, closing virtually at the top.

There was a moderate demand at the opening in partial response to relatively firm Liverpool cables, and foreign buying on the new Government loan plan placing the loan value at 10 cents instead of 9. The buying was quickly supplied, however, while considerable uncertainty was expressed as to the effects of the new loan program on marketing in the South and prices reacted to about yesterday's closing quotations during the middle of the day.

But later reports from Washington amplifying the provisions of the loan plan regarding adjustment payments to growers, gave prices a fresh boost.

Exports today, 1,334, making 165,771 so far this season. Port receipts 25,243. U. S. port stocks, 1,169,253.

The range follows:

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was steady, but after advancing 1 to 7 points on the steadiness of cotton and the 10 cents Government loan, the market eased under increased liquidation on the weakness in stocks, and the reaction in grains and heaviness of lard. Final prices were 9 to 11 points net lower. Sales 64 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; September closed 10.15, October, 10.12; December, 9.93; January, 9.90; March 9.99.

Wheat Prices Dip In Dull Session

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 27.—Grain trade uncertainty as to congressional developments gave way to uneasiness associated with the Canadian wheat marketing policy and wheat prices slumped again in another draggy, dull session.

Moderate hedging and scattered selling attributed to longs formed the bulk of pressure and with buying power weak occasional rallies were not maintained. A decline in stocks was a depressing influence.

Wheat closed ⅜ to ¾ cent below the previous finish, December, 89⅞, to 90 and corn unchanged to 1¼ off; December, 56⅜ to 56½. Oats were unchanged to ¼ off; rye, ½ to ⅝ down and barley unchanged to ½ up.

Under weakness in September corn, new crop corn deliveries canceled early gain, but held steady at the close. A weaker cash market tended to depress the nearby corn option. Oats largely followed wheat action. Provisions were steady to lower.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

3 GENERATIONS IN 29 YEARS!
MRS. HUBERT EDWARDS, 29-YEAR-OLD GRANDMOTHER, HER 13-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER, AND TINY GRANDDAUGHTER... Kurtz, Ind., 1933
THE TREE SWALLOW IS THE FIRST BIRD TO FLY NORTH IN THE SPRING AND THE LAST TO FLY SOUTH IN THE WINTER...
THE WORLD'S MOST NORTHERN GOLF CLUB— Chesterfield Inlet, Hudson Bay, HAS JUST 3 MEMBERS— A MISSIONARY, A MOUNTY AND A BUSINESS MAN...
SAVED BY A MIRACLE!
U-BOAT 35 WAS MIRACULOUSLY SAVED FROM DESTRUCTION WHEN A PERFECTLY AIMED ITALIAN TORPEDO JUMPED OUT OF THE WATER AND SAILED HARMLESSLY OVER THE CRAFT!
-1917-

STRANGE as it seems, the most northern golf course in the world is also one of the most exclusive in the world. It is located just south of the Arctic Circle at Chesterfield Inlet on the Hudson Bay. Its membership totals three—a mounted policeman, a missionary and a trader.

The course has only three holes—but these are played six times to make an 18-hole round, par for which is 72. The fairways are northern moss, and the greens are made from sand brought up from the coast. For caddies the members employ Eskimos, and for membership dues they pay polar bear teeth—five teeth pay for a life membership. The Eskimos, strange as it seems, play golf sometimes, but they would rather caddy.

One of the most miraculous escapes from death during the World War was that experienced by the officers and crew of the German U-Boat 35 in late 1917. The submarine was cruising at the surface when an Italian warship took it by surprise and fired a torpedo. Too late to dive or get out of the way, members of the crew on deck helplessly watched the torpedo head straight for the midsection of the submarine.

Suddenly, when it was within a few yards of its mark, it jumped out of the water and over the German craft. The torpedo just cleared the deck, passing between the conning tower and forward gun—if it had hit either of these it would have exploded.

Again, before the submarine could get out of the way, another torpedo was fired straight at it. It, too, sped straight for the middle of the sub—but it was fired a little too deep, and passed harmlessly under the craft.

Upton, Pa., Resident Killed in Auto Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Upton, Pa., Aug. 27.—Miss Sara Stuff, 32, of Upton, and Clyde C. Netzley, of Naperville, Ill., her cousin, were killed in an automobile accident at Naperville recently. Miss Stuff was en route to her home here after a visit with relatives in the Middle West.

She is survived by her mother, Mrs. May Stuff, of Upton; two brothers, William Stuff, of Upton, and the Rev. John Stuff, of Brunswick, Md., and one sister, Mrs. Esther Brake, of Mechanicsburg. Funeral services will be held at her home tomorrow afternoon with burial in Cedar Hill Cemetery, Greencastle.

Eugenia Williams Wed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 27.—Hosea U. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson, and Miss Eugenie Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, were married here yesterday by the Rev. Charles T. Herndon. Mr. Johnson, a native of Warren County, now makes his home at Hume, Fauquier County.

New Pistols for Police.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsport, Md., Aug. 27.—The town council has decided to equip its police department with new revolvers and has also ordered Sam Brown belts for the two officers.

Tax Rate to Be Fixed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 27.—The city tax rate for the next fiscal year will be fixed at a meeting of the mayor and aldermen tomorrow night. At the same time the budget appropriations will be announced. The aldermen will hold an executive session before the meeting to consider adoption of the State and County assessment for taxable city property. The present city tax rate is 95 cents on $100.

Relief Project Starts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 27.—Fifty relief workers chosen from the relief rolls in Waynesboro and Mount Alto are gathering forest seeds for use in the soil conservation program planned for this section or watershed. The work is under the direction of J. T. Bregger, recently transferred here from the Indiana, Pa., office.

THE NEW TALON FASTENED BACK LACE W. B. CORSET!

This, we believe, is really something! A new corset which laces down the back . . . so that you may adjust it to suit your own curves . . . with a slick talon fastener up the front in place of the bulky old hooks and eyes of yore! It has plenty of boning so that your tummy is flattened out nicely. Sizes 25 to 38.

Third Floor, Corsets

Rubinstein Skin Clearing Cream

—a summer beauty necessity

For a radiant, transparently lovely skin . . . we recommend Helena Rubinstein's Skin Clearing Cream . . . a splendid way to correct sallowness, dullness and freckles! You will want to use it all year round for sheer skin health as well as beauty!

$1 and 2.50

Main Floor, Toiletries

mean downright sleeping comfort!

Lounge in them now . . . sleep in them when the weather turns cool! They're in fetching two-piece styles and come in pretty pastels that will bring admiring exclamations from your college chums. Blue, maize, tearose, or green and unusual color combinations. Small, medium or large.

Main Floor, Lingerie

Vivid the hue!
Satin the cry!

in this new fall blouse

1.95

It's one of those softly tailored, flattering blouses that seem to look right with either tailored or more dressy suits! Soft shirring at neckline. Big full sleeves. In emerald green, purple, white, dusty pink or beige satin.
